

Instruments of Deception

The Masked Rulers of the World

Tom Sheldon

Dedicated to all who inspired me to write this book, especially Marion O'Doherty from Angel Grove/Couiza.

Front cover illustration: Sunrise on top of Mount Sinai, Egypt. The sun was automatically blackened out by the camera filter; hence the picture shows a black spot for the sun.

Rear cover illustration: Artists impression: 'Masked Rulers of the World.'

Biblical scriptures: All Biblical scriptures were taken from the New International Version Bible.

Arithmetic: All the equations used in this book are accurate, but on some occasions measurements have either been fractionally rounded up or down for simplicity.

Copyright © 2009 Tom Sheldon.

Instruments of Deception: the masked rulers of the world.

First Edition 2009. Non Fiction.

Tom Sheldon asserts the moral right to be identified as the author of this work.

Published by Lulu.Com

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in or introduced into a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise) without the written permission of the publisher. Any person who does any unauthorised act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

ISBN 978-1-4092-6627-3

Authors Email: Authorswork@live.co.uk

CONTENTS

BIOGRAPHY – PAGE 8

INTRODUCTION – PAGE 10

C 1 – MISCONCEPTIONS - PAGE 13:

This chapter is essentially an introduction, showing how humanity's perception can be moulded and manipulated due to nurturing. This nurturing process is a subtle and effective method that locks us into a state of cultural hypnosis. Ground shattering events like September 11th can be misconceived and misinterpreted due to this hypnotic conditioning. Back in antiquity major events were quickly altered and camouflaged to hide their true significance. The ancient Egyptian obsession with the heavens and the star Sirius is one example I describe. Furthermore, could the origins of the major religions be a result of ancient alterations of events? Has an original truth been hidden from humanity and substituted and promoted into a believable lie? If this is true then humanity has adopted and grown into a culture seeded from a lie. Also, has an alternative version of astrology been created to hide the real hijacked version of old? These are some points I describe in this chapter and throughout the book.

C 2 - MANIPULATION METHODS – PAGE 35:

This chapter details how we as a species are deviously tricked and duped by society's rules, regulations, and customs. Most of our daily pursuits that we take for granted are nothing more than distractions invented to divert our attention away from a sinister hidden agenda. Most religious practices, including clairvoyance and the new age movement, are cleverly constructed substitutes masking this real agenda. Even some of our most guarded western institutions like democracy, justice, and the media industry are nothing more than ingeniously invented organizations imposing a manipulated façade of fairness. In truth an ancient secret oligarchy controls and pulls the strings of power that dictate to the masses.

C 3 - ELITE KNOWLEDGE – PAGE 53:

This is a continuation from the previous chapter. I further detail how the political, media, and legal systems are manufactured scams invented to suck away the public's right to choose, and most importantly their power. The old historical empires that attempted to conquer the world are in fact still very much alive. They simply adapt and change over time; reinventing themselves as modern institutions. Reinventing and repackaging the old oligarchy eventually took the form of the Industrial revolution, and in more recent times it has transformed into the world financial system. The whole game plan is to thwart human evolution by every means possible. This includes intentionally increasing crime and introducing the national identity card, which will slowly develop into the subcutaneous microchip. This is the fascist mindset that runs our world today.

C 4 – ELITE SCAMS – PAGE 73:

Chapter 4 deals with the role of the secret service establishments like MI5, MI6, CIA, and the FBI. Are these establishment the main communications interface between the ruling elite and the mass public? What is possibly going on behind the scenes in places like area 51 with genetic engineering? Has the government created advanced beings with superior knowledge, and how does this relate to alien abductions? I speculate on Hitler's objective during the Second World War and the whole race purity scenario. Furthermore, how do the range of modern viruses and diseases attacking humanity relate to racial purity? What weapons are being used against us in order to halt or hinder our evolution, and does this involve the national ID card scheme? Finally, is humanity verging on an imminent leap in evolution?

C 5 - IMERIAL & METRIC – PAGE 91:

This chapter explains the true origins of our various units of measurement that we use on a daily basis. I describe how these units actually relate to the heavenly motions. We are automatically conditioned to think that somehow they evolved naturally and randomly through time. In fact this is a complete lie. I clearly show that an elite secret organization with extensive knowledge of the heavens must have existed back in antiquity. I describe where units like the centimetre, foot, yard, inch, metre, and furlong derived from. I also detail the origins of the temperature scales, our clock, and why we celebrate New Year on the 1st of January. Furthermore, some of these units relate not only to the heavens but biblical prophecy.

C 6 – NUMEROLOGY – PAGE 109:

Again this chapter deals with numerology. I describe how the speed of light relates to the dimensions of planet earth and the moon. Furthermore, Christian symbols like the cross also relate to the cycles of the sun, moon, and earth. I also describe the origins of the Star of David, Seal of Solomon, and the Square and Compass; showing how these mystical symbols connect with our measurements and the heavens. I explain how our weights including the stone, kilogram, pound, and ounce, all have their origins in the sky. Last but not least I clarify the origins of the week, mile and what ties the western nations up with the 2012 London Olympics and biblical prophecy.

C 7 - MYTHOLOGICAL TALES – PAGE 125:

This chapter deals with the natural force that drives human evolution forward. I also show that a secret sinister ruling elite, has constantly lurked behind the scenes thwarting that natural progression. I attempt to tie all this up with the famous Christian Holy Grail. I speculate on our surveillance ridden society and where it may be leading us as a species. Are we on the cusp of an Orwellian global fascist state, and why is the national ID card scheme being forced upon us daily? Will all this technological surveillance actually help humanity move forward or simply aid the real sinister agenda behind the scenes? I relate all these issues to biblical scripture and heavenly numerology. What exactly is the whole concept of the UFO phenomenon, and could it actually tie up with the existence of an alternative universe? Does the biblical Satan dwell in this alternative universe manipulating humankind? What are the symbolic and numerological connections between the Sun's measurements, and the Prime Ministers residence at Downing Street London? Were many of the ancient tribes like the Cathars, Witches, and Aborigines intentionally slaughtered to aid this secret global power that now runs the world? Finally, how our DNA is pre-programmed to naturally evolve just as the whole universe is in a state of evolution.

C 8 - THE GREAT PYRAMID – PAGE 144:

This chapter focuses solely on the Great Pyramid in Egypt; that magnificent ancient monument that has fascinated people for thousands of years. I identify various areas of importance like building techniques, size, stability, labour, weathering, and what significance it has in relation to the heavens. I believe contemporary writers have overlooked some obvious points I outline in this chapter. I also shed light upon why the great pyramid was built, and express the elaborate geometric knowledge the ancient Egyptians possessed. This knowledge undoubtedly included precise astronomical measurements relating to the sun and speed of light. Furthermore, I speculate on the biblical Ark of the Covenant and its significance in relation to the great pyramid.

FINAL THOUGHTS – PAGE 166:

Closing thoughts and conclusion.

GLOSSARY – PAGE 169.

BIOGRAPHY

I was born in 1967; brought up and educated in Glasgow. I am currently employed as a computer engineer for a well known international I.T. company, where I have been working for the past nine years. This allows me to self-fund my research into a diverse range of global mysteries, conspiracy theories, and numerology, which I have been investigating for the past ten years. My interest in writing began when I successfully completed my first mystery novel, titled 'Death's Door'. I was inspired to write this satanic murder novel due to my extensive travelling in Egypt at the time. Unfortunately, my visit to Egypt coincided with the atrocious slaughter of tourists by Islamic terrorists in 1997. The tourist industry undoubtedly took a massive slump due to this dreadful incident. One of the terrible knock-on effects this massacre had was to leave the whole Giza Pyramid plateau absolutely devoid of tourists. Fortunately, for me, I had the whole area to myself. It was during this period I became seriously interested in researching and investigating the Giza pyramids and world mysteries in general. Even though I've always had an enthusiastic interest in anything mysterious; the writing of 'Death's Door' and the whole Egyptian scenario kick-started my research and writing into factual mysteries. The whole event was a serious learning curve for me, and I have subsequently been back to Egypt many times since. Although, by then the Giza plateau was back to its normal hustle and bustle, and not the desolate pyramid complex I had encountered on my first visit. However, my inspiration was already alight. It was then I realised my writing could evolve into a serious career, because I had now uncovered some ground-breaking material. Material, I hope would furnish the public with a new angle on reality. My writing embraces a variety of subjects like Astronomy, Astrology, Metrology, and Egyptology. During my investigations I have travelled to many locations and countries. These places include Renne Le Chateau in France, Mount Sinai and the Giza Pyramid complex in Egypt, South America, Australia, Israel, and Roslyn Chapel in Scotland. I believe these mysterious locations subtly interlink with baffling relics like the Holy Grail, and the Ark of the Covenant. Furthermore, my investigations delve into ancient biblical and non-biblical prophecies from people like, Nostradamus, Edgar Cayce, and the biblical books of Enoch, Daniel, and Revelation. I have always had a keen interest in what relevance these extraordinary writings have for humankind; and desire to expose the truth lurking behind the camouflage. The findings of my research have been collated into my current book titled 'Instruments of Deception', and I continue to self-fund my investigations into the unexplained baffling mysteries of our world.

INTRODUCTION

This book has merely scratched the surface of a huge area of study. The 'ruling elite' is a term I have used that refers to the hidden architects of our social structure. They have manoeuvred events to fit their long term agenda throughout the ages. That agenda is to completely control humanity's fate and destiny. They achieve this through a series of manufactured scams, tricks, and subtle deceptions built into our social fabric. In effect they are the ultimate secret society. They have put in position a long term program that will seize our freedoms and liberty from under our noses. While at the same time pretending to offer us security from the big bad monsters they have secretly created. Monsters like global terrorism, dangerous rogue states, and an air of social and financial uncertainty. These constructs have been elaborately created to pilfer away our real freedoms. Our whole social structure is a manufactured framework which has ultimately been invented to nurture us into a state of obedience. It's a grand social brainwashing program on a global scale. Ironically, the majority of the population believes they are free when in fact they are under a state of hypnosis. It's not the normal kind of hypnosis we are all familiar with, but an unquestionable compliance to our way of life and upbringing. We are so conditioned by our society and culture that we cease to notice our regular destructive habits. We fail to comprehend that our way of life is an integral part of our hypnotic condition.

I hope this book gives the reader a taste of the hidden aspects the ruling elite play on the mass public. The whole idea of a secret society manoeuvring events may sound ludicrous. However, this is only because the concept of a secret mystical government controlling the population is so alien to most people. We are never tutored or instructed about such scenarios or possibilities. All we perceive is what we have been taught or experience. This is the social hypnotic programming I am talking about. Our worldview is a result of our education and experience as we drift through life. What forces are operating behind the scenes is very rarely noticed.

I have also attempted to offer a fresh perspective on the tedious subject of numerology. Contemporary books tend to offer elaborate mathematical equations to justify their numerical foundations. This method can sometimes overwhelm readers into putting the book down before they have grasped the first equation. Instead, I have opted to present my numerical work in a straight forward manner that offers real substance and weight. This instantly hits the reader with unshakably proof rather than torturous equations. The numerical connections I have discovered undoubtedly imply a hidden force has surreptitiously invented these units. Furthermore, an elaborate scientific knowledge of astronomy would ultimately be essential in order to create these units.

For example, the fact that the sun rotates on its axis can not be determined by the naked eye. Sophisticated instrumentation and an accurate knowledge of the heavens are required to measure such solar rotations. The significance of this fact will become apparent as I describe the true roots of astrology and numerology. Moreover, the origins of our various units stretch well back into antiquity, which infers a scientific knowledge existed back then. For example, to measure the exact speed of light to a high degree of accuracy requires intricate knowledge and equipment. This velocity can not be determined by makeshift props or gadgets. Furthermore, I believe the great pyramid in Egypt is the ruling elite's first established holy temple, symbolically representing their long term mathematical agenda depicted in stone.

I believe the whole construct of our various religions and beliefs on earth today is a prime example of the social conditioning implanted into humanity's psyche. I say this without being too critical or offensive to any particular sect, faith, or religion. The whole religious setup is a manufactured scam cleverly disguised under the blanket of good deeds. The control of human evolution is what the ruling elite are endeavoring to achieve. They genuinely want us to believe we are free and shaping our own destiny when in fact they are manoeuvring events to coincide with their agenda. That agenda is the theft of the human spirit. I hope the information I have described in this book encourages others to continue uncovering the global scam played upon us all. However, I believe the conspiracy goes much deeper than I can speculatively express in just one book. I have many more areas of research that I will continue to investigate and put down in writing, but in the meantime enjoy reading.

CHAPTER 1

Misconceptions

It seems to be a natural human attraction to be captivated by antique relics. For example, how many people admire old European castles, abbeys, and churches? The older the architecture the more air of mystery it appears to possess, even though the reason for building them is clearly understood. These buildings were constructed for practical reasons and contain no mystery at all. Although, in reality they still manage to inspire awe in the public imagination. Now just consider the age of these structures. At very maximum some European castles and abbeys are probably one thousand years old. Even then, that estimated figure is almost certainly too high. Bear in mind that castles and abbeys are only in good condition because they have been repeatedly renovated or rebuilt through many generations. Castles were primarily built as fortresses to withstand attacks from warfare, but even then renovation work is still required for them to endure. Even the two thousand year old ancient Roman edifices that survive today are now just a mass of rubble. Why do people seem so attached to antique relics like castles and abbeys? I believe it gives them a sense of meaning and authenticity in their lives. However, this wasn't the reason why these mighty buildings were constructed. I believe the same principle applies to our various belief systems and religions. Many people fall for the dogma of traditional religions believing it to be the true word of god. Yet, all this could be a misplaced concept, and the whole religious set-up might just be manufactured for an alternative purpose. Just like the ancient edifices we seem so captivated by.

Today people have lost the true meaning behind the ancient mysteries of the world. The bulk of the population view antiquity as a prehistoric era that has no bearing on modern day events. Human beings have a unique talent to quickly shrug off yesterday's news, whether it is good, bad, or absolutely terrible. They swiftly move on with their lives and old news soon becomes yesterday's boring gossip. That's because most people have a short span of attention. Modern groundbreaking media stories quickly lose their shock factor and the current tittle-tattle rapidly moves onto the latest issues of the day. Take September the 11th attacks on New York for example. Most people don't think twice about it now. Ask anyone in the street what they think or feel towards that horrifying day. The response might be a feeling of sympathy for the people and families involved, but the true impact of that terrible event has gone. The shock factor that happened on that particular day no longer exists. That's because human nature doesn't let us dwell upon past events readily, no matter how bad. It's healthy to move on and forget about previous troubles. Not that I want anyone to burden themselves by fretting over that terrible day, but it illustrates our nature regarding groundbreaking news. We quickly become desensitised to shocking events.

I believe that sometime back in antiquity, a groundbreaking event occurred, prompting the ruling elite of the day to invent what we today call religion. This project didn't just concern ancient civilisation, but the whole of humanity. The crucial groundbreaking event that motivated them to do this has well and truly gone. As each generation passed, the memory of that landmark experience eventually dwindled into the abyss. Humanity was left with nothing more than ancient tales, myths, and belief systems. What was this stunning event? Perhaps we shall never know. The memory of September 11th will become more distant with the passage of time. Similarly, the memory of that ancient event has totally diminished into obscurity. The so called shock factor no longer exists, only vague scraps of evidence and distant myths linger. Extrapolating the meaning behind humankind's origins from this ancient mystery is a daunting task.

Humanity has forgotten its roots. Modern people have no time to ponder upon their origins or fate. They are too busy working their little hearts out earning money. Here lies the main problem with today's public perception of the truth. They innocently hide under the title of fashion and modernity, believing it somehow equals knowledge. The truth is in fact totally different. I'm not saying that a poor beggar on the streets is the fountain of all knowledge. However, at least attempting to understand the ancient myths may shed a glimmer of light upon a subject that is entirely misunderstood by the mass public. Where humanity originated from and where it is going lies at the root of this book. The so called shock factor that befell humankind back in antiquity has long since disappeared. To rekindle that truth into the public domain is extremely difficult. Just like it is impossible to revive the effects of September 11th. Not that I want to stir up raw sensitive emotions, but the same principle applies in attempting to decode the hidden truth of humanity's past.

Most people have a sense of direction and purpose in their lives. It's healthy and meaningful to plan ahead and have a general belief that we control our own destiny. However, the next few chapters describe an entirely opposite viewpoint. It's my belief that a covert force has been controlling human destiny since the earliest times in our history. I'm not suggesting that every event in our life has been controlled by these mysterious characters. Although, I do believe that major world events have been orchestrated and manoeuvred by them. The first half of this book describes the general background and manipulation these secret controllers play upon us on a grand scale. The second half shows clear evidence that a scheming force has lurked in the shadows devising systems that appear to us as natural. I also illustrate some real life examples how this powerful hidden elite has subtly interfered in human affairs. Finally, my conclusion will encapsulate what might befall humanity as a result of this hidden hand manipulation.

It is important to understand that life back in ancient times compared to our way of life today wasn't entirely dissimilar. They too were duped into accepting the beliefs, customs, and laws that their dictators or governments wanted them to believe. What was considered normal by them was invented and influenced by the same unseen force that controls our culture and ultimately us. However, ancient people viewed the natural world in stark contrast from us. For example, they would have been awestruck by simple daily observations like the rising and setting of the sun. Even the various phases of the moon would have appeared magical. We take all these processes for granted and that's because we understand the underlying mechanical workings and motions of the heavenly bodies. Since the advent of modern science we no longer see the natural world in a mystical or magical light. More or less, everything in our existence can be explained rationally. The scientific world and its methods didn't exist thousands of years ago. Therefore, it was customary for the ancient masses to see such phenomena in a more esoteric supernatural manner. To them a mystical viewpoint was reality and completely truthful within their concept of the universe. In the same way our scientific belief is obvious and normal to us today. They could see nature's wondrous processes occurring before their eyes but were unable to explain it. Simple things like a plant growing or a flower blossoming may seem incredibly mundane to us, but to ancient people it was the work of an all present invisible God. They had no knowledge of the underlying chemistry and biology behind such things. However, we do, and there lies the major difference between our way of thinking and theirs.

Just ponder upon some of nature's wonderful works for a moment and consider how the ancients would have related to such occurrences. For example, the sheer scale and diversity of life all over the globe is incredible, with millions of independent organisms living in relative harmony. All life has different characteristics and traits, each with their unique nuances and abilities to adapt to various circumstances and dangers. The food they eat grows miraculously from trees and plants as if by magic. Let's not forget the various weather patterns that blanket the Earth; ranging from rain, snow, hail, typhoons, hurricanes, and thunder. All this phenomena must have been unexplainable and terrifying to the ancients. Things like fire, birth, old age, and death must have appeared like powerful divine forces at work in humankind's affairs. Today we obviously understand this is not the case, but to the ancients the notion of God would have been a commonly accepted truth. They simply feared what they didn't understand and attempted to answer the workings of nature the best way possible. It clearly shows how attitudes and beliefs conform to the accepted knowledge of the day. If you were born and brought up in a culture that believed these happenings were the result of a divine being, then you would automatically accept it as fact. Unless someone could demonstrate differently you would continue living in naivety without questioning the status quo. The ancients believed the whole world was controlled by an invisible force called God. Since nature and its diversity can be found all over the globe they deduced God must be everywhere. Therefore, the force that controls nature is universal. That force is God. Today we know that chemistry, biology, and physics are the underlying mechanisms that control nature, but the ancients were unaware of these precise concepts. That doesn't necessarily mean they were stupid or incapable of tackling a particular problem logically. It just means they had a completely different viewpoint on the fundamental workings of the natural world around them. Just as one culture on earth may cling to one set of beliefs as opposed to another. Both believe their mode of thinking is correct; unfortunately both have been unconsciously duped into believing that doctrine in the first place.

Whether your belief mirrors the ancient mode of thinking or our modern scientific way is irrelevant, because both perspectives are controlled by the same hidden puppeteers. These puppeteers are the Global Elite. Although, the ultimate controlling force is the power of the Sun. The Sun is the all powerful engine that drives both the natural world and the ancient mythical God that controlled everything. Even today we recognise the Sun is the sustaining life giver in every aspect of nature. Without it all life would undoubtedly perish. The ancients essentially saw the Sun as a visible representation of the invisible force that controls nature. That's why the Sun was worshiped as a God in ancient times. In other words, if the Sun controls and fuels the natural world, then the Sun embodies the essence of the hidden omnipotent God.

Many experts believe that the ancient Egyptian culture regarded stars like Sirius and Orion's belt as superior luminaries. I agree that these stars were extremely important to the ancient Egyptians, but not as significant as the Sun and Moon. The two largest visible objects in the sky are unquestionably the Sun and the Moon. Their authority upon the world far outstrips that of any other star. The Sun and Moon separates day from night, dictates our sleep patterns, and rules our clock and calendar system. It controls our seasons, tides, weather patterns, farming, and crop growth. Additionally, it has the power to influence the behaviour patterns of many species of animals on Earth. Even a woman's monthly menstrual period is based on the lunar cycles. Numerous other aspects of life are intrinsically linked to the cycles of the Sun and Moon, but these are just some common examples. Don't get me wrong because I believe the star Sirius was and still is important, but not as strongly as the Sun and Moon. It is transparently obvious that the Sun and Moon are the most important objects in the sky. They are ultimately crucial for maintaining life on planet Earth. There is no twisted ambiguous analogy needed to represent the Sun as a God. I believe the Sun was looked upon by the ancients as the shining light of God, because it literally shines and it literally sustains life. Therefore, it is quite a straight forward meaning. We understand the cosmos in a vastly different way to the ancients, because they were unaware of the precise scientific principles we utilize today. The true fundamental nature of the universe and its chemistry are more clearly understood in modern times. But imagine if today's scientific knowledge was unavailable to you. No doubt you would be compelled to regard the Sun and Moon in a similar fashion as the ancients did. They viewed these heavenly objects with divine status.

It may seem like a natural development for ancient people to relate the motion of the stars, planets, and especially the Sun and Moon to their daily lives. Monitoring the seasons and rain fall would have been necessary for farming and other essential chores back then. Weather patterns would have changed as the year progressed and would directly relate to the position of the Moon, stars, and Sun. So, it would have been crucial for them to utilise the observable sky to measure the passage of time and attempt to predict the changes in climate. This all seems obvious and I don't doubt for one minute that the ancient cultures were well aware of the heavenly skies. I believe their measuring and counting systems directly reflects the hidden knowledge relating to the skies. This can be observed in my mathematical findings outlined in the second half of this book.

Further evidence exists to support the idea that the Sun was an important celestial object. In ancient Egypt the Sun God Re or Ra was superior to the Pharaoh and was only worshiped by him. Worshiping Re the Sun God was introduced in the 3rd dynasty, just around the time the pyramid building began. Until the 18th dynasty no one of lower rank below the Pharaoh dared worship Re the Sun God. Even above the door lintels of many tombs in Egypt are carved winged Sun discs.

Just as the ancients believed in a doctrine that seems absurd to us today, we too cling onto beliefs riddled with ridiculous dogma. It is a widely held belief that the roots of all modern religions have a single common origin dating back to ancient times. Although, most Christians, Jews, and Islamic people will passionately disagree, claiming their faith is the correct and righteous way of the one true God. Christians will believe whole heartedly that Jesus is our only saviour and was born through divine conception. He supposedly died for our sins on a cross in order to save us all. On the other hand, Jews will argue that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are the chosen lineage favoured by the true god. Through these patriarchs emerged the twelve tribes of Israel who were ultimately led to the promise land by God. Finally, Muslims will unwaveringly declare that Allah is the only true God, and Muhammad is his true earthly messenger, which relegates Jesus to a mere prophet.

Perhaps this ability to blindly believe in a concept and way of life so strongly and passionately is no more than one of humankind's major flaws. I mentioned earlier that it's a natural human attraction for people to be captivated by ancient relics. However, this principle can also be applied to ancient beliefs. The older the religious ideology the more sense of authenticity it appears to have. Hence, it grips the imagination more tightly. But antiquity alone does not qualify any belief system to be truthful. It would be utterly naïve to conclude that simply because something is old it automatically has to be true. Lies, deceit, and misinterpretation have followed humankind throughout history. People promote lies just as easily as people promote truth. What better cover story for lies to breed than to camouflage it with a convincing religion? Religion is the very concept that was designed to control, dictate, and manipulate what people can and can not do in their daily lives. Its success has imprisoned humankind for millennia. I'm not saying that every aspect of religious doctrine is being used as a vehicle to advance lies. However, all that is needed is a few bad apples thrown in strategically to distort the whole theme of truth. Once this has been achieved then time alone will add further distortions to misdirect and deceive people even more.

I believe that back in ancient history a religious concept existed that gave birth to all the major world religions and beliefs. This root concept was the original source of truth that held many of humankind's profound answers. It is certainly debatable what this original root concept was, if indeed one existed. Logically a common origin of truth must be the oldest spiritual concept known to humankind. Otherwise, how could it be the source? If a common source did exist and gave birth to all known religions, then what we have today is a hotchpotch of progressive alterations passed on through numerous generations. So where does this leave our three major religions? Well, obviously Judaism is the oldest of the three and logically must be closer to the original truth. Therefore, Judaism must be more accurate than Christianity and Islam. But hang on a minute! Older belief systems exist, which predate Judaism, making it look like a modern fad in comparison. For example, ancient Egyptian, Babylonian, and Sumerian cultures predate most beliefs known to man. Therefore, the three major religions today are totally unsatisfactory in their present form to ascertain what this original root truth was.

The world religions may carry grains of truth, but most of its doctrines have been watered down and manipulated through the generations as each society adopted them. To be truthful people were forced to adopt them. Humans by their very nature love to rule the roost. An existing belief system would have provided the ruling elite with a perfect structure to gain control over the population. However, there is more to the story than humankind simply altering religious truths to mislead and control the population. For mass control to properly succeed it was necessary for the ruling elite to modify the original truth and substitute it with a convincing cover story. The major religions we have today are the so called convincing cover stories. Failing to alter the original truth would have guaranteed the destruction of all major religions before they could ever get established. It would have also thwarted the ruling elite's main objective of mass control. A cleverly devised cover story had to be invented that gave the masses hope, albeit a false hope of salvation. At the same time it had to deter the flock from leaving by introducing an element of fear and punishment into the equation. Therefore, the heaven and hell scenario was born to ensure effective control over the masses.

The hope came in the form of miracles like parting the red sea, curing the blind, bringing the dead back to life, the promise land story, and even the assurance of going to heaven after death. The fear came in the form of equally supernatural powers like hell and damnation, the ten plagues on Egypt, demon possession, and the terrible prophecies foretold in the book of revelation. The religious texts are full of such hopes and horrors. All of them designed to hoodwink the population into the subtle traps of hope and fear.

This is the very religious system we have in place today on a global scale. It's all based on humankind's warped addiction for greed, control, and power. They use hope and fear to achieve this goal. These invented cover stories have been festering away for thousands of years constantly duping humans into believing a fairytale faith. In order for the fairytale faith to survive the ravages of time the ruling elite had to introduce a policy of forced belief. In other words the population was forced to believe what was dictated to them by the powerful hierarchy. Failing to comply would guarantee you the death sentence. Alternatively, you could be labelled as a heretic, witch, or demon, in which case you were still put to death at the stake. These various labels and names carried negative connotations, which conveniently reinforced the belief of hell into the public domain. This is the real reason behind all the historic holy wars, crusades, and missionary work. It was simply to conquer new lands and convert the masses into following and believing in one master. People have been indoctrinated into following a manufactured religion that was initially designed to snare us into believing its version of truth. Once the initial belief system was established by force then each generation would rear their children into the same compulsory doctrine. If you were born and brought up in a particular culture, then your central belief is moulded from an early age as a way of life. Unfortunately, the vast number of people don't realise they are being deviously conditioned using this concept. From that point onwards a religious belief would perpetuate itself by the very nature of an accepted cultural way of life. Even today similar methods are utilised in almost every religion in the world. Not as severe as putting people to death, but the techniques employed are sneaky and play with people's emotional vulnerability such as hope and fear. These religions will evolve in such a manner that their policies and doctrines will adapt as the population eventually sees through the scam. When people finally see through the peddled lies and give up following stupid rules and doctrines, they abandon it and move on with their lives. But the ruling elite survive by branching off from the main body of religion and start a new cult following. This only serves to dupe the masses into yet another fake doctrine and keep the ruling elite in power. It doesn't matter what belief system you follow because each one has branched off from the original main body. All current belief systems blend together a mixture of lies and double meanings. They peddle their own unique brand of spin and cover stories to dupe the masses. None of them accurately reflect the original truth that was hijacked by the elite for their sinister purpose of mass control.

Even the vast numbers of non religious people are still ignorant of the truth. They too are unaware of the original root source that was hijacked by the elite thousands of years ago. No doubt most atheists or agnostics see through the veil of hypocrisy, corruption, and obvious brainwashing techniques used in religions. This is certainly a positive step in the correct direction. However, it still doesn't shine any light upon the original truth that was robbed from humanity.

It isn't just the three major religions that rope people into the blind alley of faith. Other cults, faiths, sects, and factions employ the same trickery and misrepresentation on innocent newcomers. They all use the same underlying principles of salvation and fear. Even the so called New Age movement, which prides itself on a trendy way of approaching spirituality falls into similar traps. They believe that being open minded and accepting new ideas in order to search for the truth is the correct approach. However, this positive mentality is often coupled with the notion of believing in what makes you feel comfortable, and avoiding obvious evidence. Scientific verification tends to take second place to instinct and intuition in the new age movement. They are inclined to latch onto anything that bolsters their existing snug beliefs. Any eastern philosophy or religion is likely to take precedent unquestionably. Their unspoken tenet seems to be, if it's old, eastern, and mystical, it must be correct. Just as long as it's not mainstream. Unfortunately they don't realise they are just strengthening their own delusions. The whole point of being open minded and questioning the unknown is to deduce whether it's based on facts. Not if it encourages your present belief system or makes you feel more at ease with your circumstances. Eastern philosophy or not! The New Age approach might sound appealing, but it's exactly the same mentality people fall for in mainstream religions. If you are going to abandon facts and replace it with intuition or instinct, then essentially you believe in what makes you feel comfortable. All you are doing is burying your head in the sand. There's nothing new about that because it's been going on for thousands of years. You never progress beyond a comfort zone of fantasy.

There's nothing wrong with using intuition or instinct, because these natural traits can be of supreme benefit in everyday situations. But, they should not be the overall deciding factor in seeking or deducing the truth. That should be up to the individual to question and use the relevant facts to come to an educated judgement.

Remember, the more varying belief systems that exists the more humankind squabbles and fights over which one is right. This only serves people with a more tedious job of searching through the endless quagmire of false beliefs. It simply diverts people's attention away from recognising the real truth, which was hijacked in antiquity by the ruling elite and remains carefully hidden today.

The fairytale cover stories invented to dupe the masses could not be implemented in one full sweep. It had to transpire slowly over time in order for it to work effectively. Rewriting the truth completely from scratch would make the population extremely suspicious, and ultimately control over them would fail. Therefore, it was crucial for the elite to gradually change the original truth by removing or altering the most important parts from the doctrine. The various religious books available today have been manipulated and altered far beyond the original texts. Their main objective has been to conceal the truth, and at the same time introduce a convincing cover story in its place.

So what is this common root truth I am constantly referring to? Well there are two points to consider in this question. Firstly, who exactly are the elite? And secondly, what is the original truth they hijacked? The whole plethora of beliefs, religions, and cults thriving on earth today are only manufactured cover stories, albeit convincing ones. They were engineered to mask the existence of that original hijacked truth, which humanity has lost. To establish what that truth was, we must look at one of the oldest surviving belief systems on earth. That is astrology. Modern astrology is the study of the positions of the stars, planets, and other celestial objects and how they influence human affairs.

Strangely enough astrology is historically prevalent in nearly all of the world religions, like Hinduism, Sikhism, Islam, Judaism, Christianity, and many other faiths. In most ancient scriptures star gazing or consulting the heavens was a common occurrence. However, most of these practises were outlawed by the hierarchy that controlled the various religions. Galileo was a classic example of how the hierarchy intimidates people that get too close to the truth. Today a glimmer of that astrology can still be seen in the ancient scriptures.

According to archaeologists the ancient land of Sumer, which is now modern day Iraq, is where humankind's earliest settlements emerged from. It dates back to between 3000-4000BC, and it's from here the first cities like Ur, Kish, and Eridu appeared. The political, educational, and financial backbones of civilised society that we take for granted all had its roots firmly fixed in ancient Sumer. Crucial skills like writing, farming, trade, crafts, and architecture all sprang from here. Sumer eventually merged into the Babylonian empire around 2000BC and it was around this time astrology supposedly surfaced. Babylon and Sumer effectively occupy the same land along the Euphrates River. No doubt the Babylonians adopted most of the Sumerian culture and technology. It's also reasonable to assume they inherited their astrological beliefs too.

Most people view astrology as an outdated concept that has well and truly been resigned to history. It's perceived as nothing more than a load of hocus-pocus fortune telling. It's the art of taking someone's date and time of birth and deducing specific characteristics assigned to them according to the position of the stars and planets. It's like being dealt a hand of cards at birth by the celestial bodies, and depending upon their positions at that time dictates your specific traits. But this viewpoint has been developed by the constant nonsense conveyed by the media, so called mediums, magazines, books, and daily newspapers. In reality astrology is totally different. Unfortunately, it has fell victim to the same dishonest alterations as the major religions. Modern astrology has been modified to hide its true roots simply to accommodate the agenda of its hidden masters.

It's true that we are all dealt a set of traits and characteristics at birth. Sometimes good, and sometimes bad, but on the whole we get an even mixture that's normally well balanced. But these inherited traits are based upon genetics, not the position of the planets and stars. It's absolutely ludicrous to think that huge chunks of rock circling the sun millions of miles away can dictate our attributes and influence our life. But many in the astrological fraternity will argue such a case. They truly believe that some invisible and undetectable force emanates from the planets that can somehow mould our makeup at birth. This undetectable energy is never quite quantified or described in detail. It always remains mysteriously allusive. Perhaps it just doesn't exist. To say such things is heresy in astrological circles, but let's call a spade a spade here. Believing in what makes us feel comfortable is a powerful trait all humans possess. It's the one human failing that tends to remain unquestioned. Blind belief without backup from substantial facts is worse than religion itself. Clinging to the hope that some divine force is mysteriously manoeuvring circumstances to achieve good is a natural comfort mechanism. It is human beings that are creating the horrendous slaughter and appalling circumstances we see around the world today. Not some hidden divine power in the heavens. Don't misinterpret me because it's certainly healthy to be positive and lean on the side of optimism. Yet, it is equally unhealthy to overlook our failings by clinging to the straws of blind faith. No matter what form that blind faith might materialize or manifest itself into.

There is no doubt that the Sun and Moon played a major part in the creation and sustaining of life on earth throughout history. This is due to the fact that nearly all life on earth requires light and heat for survival. I believe the Sun's heat, light, and radiation is the fuel that drives the evolution of life forward. The Moon affects life on earth because of its close proximity to the planet, which induces a large gravitational effect upon everything. Furthermore, it reflects a large amount of the sunlight upon the earth, which has acted as a timing mechanism for species throughout earth's evolution. However, I don't believe the accepted principle in astrology that the planets have an effect on life. In this particular aspect I believe modern astrology is incorrect. One argument that's often used by astrologers is that the planets exert gravitational and magnetic forces upon us. They claim that these combined forces somehow have the potential to mould a blueprint on our characteristics at birth. It's undeniably true that all the planets exert a gravitational force, but gravity alone is extremely weak. It takes a body the size of planet Earth just to hold us on the ground. Even then jumping a few feet in the air is relatively straight forward. The larger planets like Jupiter exert an absolutely massive amount of gravitational pull. However, due to the vast distances involved its influence on us is incredibly small. The gravity Earth wields upon us far outweighs the strength of all the large planets combined. Again this is simply due to the great distances involved. It's true that gravity from the Sun and Moon do have a direct effect on planet Earth as I mentioned earlier. I will explain in detail the significance of both these celestial bodies in a later chapter. Even the gravity from Earth far outstrips the gravity the Sun and Moon impose upon us. The Sun has approximately 99% of the whole mass of the solar system. This shows how miniscule the strength of the planet's gravity actually is in comparison. It's impossible to imagine how planetary gravity can influence us. It's like shining a small torch in bright sunlight. The strong sunshine will totally consume and overshadow the weak light of the torch. This is a perfect analogy of how small an influence the gravity from other planets actually affects life on earth. All the planet's gravitational forces combined are totally overwhelmed by the Earth's gravity. These outside gravitational effects on us are less than negligible. If gravity can genuinely influence our traits at birth then surely it would come from Earth and not the planets. Therefore, our qualities are undoubtedly moulded by genetics and upbringing and not by the gravity from distant planets.

What about magnetic forces? Do the planets exert a magnetic force that might somehow mould a characteristic blueprint upon us at birth? The magnetic forces the planets emit are extremely small compared to Earth. For example, Venus and the Moon have no magnetic fields whatsoever. Mercury has a magnetic field which is 0.01 times as strong as Earth's. Mars is even weaker at about 1000 times smaller than Earth. Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune all have magnetic fields but they too are substantially weaker than Earth's. Again, let's not forget the vast distances involved between us and the outer planets. Moreover, magnetic field strength diminishes greatly with distance. This leaves only Jupiter and Pluto. Presently it's unknown whether Pluto has any magnetic field. As for Jupiter its strength is about 14 times that of Earth. This may seem like an enormous increase, but again the vast distances involved counteract its strength.

The Earth also has a natural defence mechanism in place to shield against such magnetic forces. High above the Earth is an area known as the Van Allen Belts. These two belts form a sort of protective barrier in the upper region of space. An inner belt and outer belt exist, but essentially one progressively merges into the other. They extend high above the Earth from approximately 3000 to 25000km. This region of space consists of highly charged particles of predominantly electrons and protons. Without going into too much detail here, the Van Allen Belts absorb and dissipate charged particles known as ions coming from outer space. The Sun throws off huge amounts of charged particles towards the Earth in a form known as the solar wind. If the Van Allen Belts have the ability to prevent huge amounts of dangerous charged ions reaching Earth from the Sun, then what chance has the miniscule charges from the planets got? The Earth has a further protection in the form of the ozone layer. The ozonosphere lies approximately between 6 to 30 miles above the ground. It essentially prevents a vast range of harmful electromagnetic radiation reaching Earth's surface from outer space. The ozone layer basically absorbs and blocks dangerous incoming radiation, primarily from the Sun. Furthermore, the planets don't even emit any radiation of their own. So what can this mysterious energy the astrologist are constantly referring to actually be?

The notion that gravitational, magnetic, or even radiation forces from the planets shaping us at birth is not based on facts. No mystical force has been detected to explain any mechanism that is supposed to drive this astrological blueprint. A nearby local mountain applies more gravitational and magnetic force upon us than the planets do. (Excluding Earth of course) Unfortunately, astrology has fell victim to the same corruption as the world religions. I believe this undetectable force is nothing more than a continuous re-shaped myth passed down the generations to keep yet another cover story alive. Although, the energy from the Sun and Moon in the form of gravity and radiation does play a large role in human evolution as I will explain later.

Astrology is indeed the original truth that I'm referring to. The modern equivalent has been skilfully adapted into yet another lie to conceal its underlying practise by the controlling elite. If traditional astrology is a swindle fed to the masses then what is the real McCoy? In simple terms real ancient astrology is the art of time keeping for the purpose of measuring the evolution of life. It's not just any old time keeping. Remember, the ruling elite existed long before mechanical clocks and watches were invented. They needed an accurate system of timing. Not just for practical civilian chores like farming and so on, but for implementing and carrying out what their agenda required. Essential plots and deeds were set in motion using the heavenly timing mechanism. Basically, the heavens were the ruling elite's daily schedule and calendar. Today we use clocks, watches, and a modern 365 day calendar to run our daily and yearly affairs.

But the elite still use the old ancient methods of timing and cling to it ritually. Not just because it's quaint, but because the Sun and Moon are continuing to push evolution forward. The ruling elite are obsessed with this. There is nothing mystical or hocus-pocus about their astrological methods of timekeeping. It may have been mistakenly conveyed and promoted that way, but its real purpose is practical and remains well hidden from the public.

For example, a typical person may awake at 8am on a Monday morning. Have a shower, get dressed, have breakfast, and then travel to work. At 12 O'clock lunchtime they have something to eat, drink, and have a general chit chat with friends to perk themselves up for the afternoon ahead. At 5pm they travel home to cook dinner. In the evening they relax and watch television, read a book or do something to unwind. Later that night they sleep to recharge their batteries and start the whole process over again the next day. This continual timing of events and affairs in our life never stops. Even when you're unemployed or just heart lazy, your subconscious mind will still control your daily events using the clock to a certain degree. That doesn't mean the clock emits some unknown mystical energy that literally controls you. We simply use the clock as a convenient timing device to govern and schedule our lives. It may appear to an independent observer that the clock is controlling us, but this notion is absolutely ludicrous.

Now the same scenario applies to the hidden ruling elite. They don't use normal clocks or watches to schedule their agenda of events. They use the Sun and Moon because that's the method they utilized before clocks were invented. However, the one exception is that the Sun and Moon do influence life here on earth. The heavens are an extremely accurate piece of timekeeping equipment that can be read from anywhere on the globe. Most importantly, the heavenly clock won't malfunction unexpectedly or be tampered with in the way earthly watches or clocks can. Therefore, no quibbling can occur. Just the kind of timing mechanism the ruling elite require. As I mentioned above, a glimmer of this ancient astrology can still be seen in most religious writings. For example, the biblical story where the three wise men were led to baby Jesus by a guiding star. The prophecies and visions described by the Apostle John in the book of revelation detailing the gloomy future of humankind. Another example is Enoch, who is the Great Grandfather of the famous biblical character Noah. Enoch detailed many astronomical motions and enigmas relating to humanity's future. Finally, there's the famous French prophet Nostradamus, who used astrology to foretell many future events with accuracy. These are just a few surviving examples that prove astrology was used in the past. There is no hocus-pocus guess work involved here. The ruling elite know exactly what they are doing. In simple terms the ancient heavenly God was the Sun and Moon that influences planet Earth. It was the Sun/God that created, sustains, and drives life forward, and still does. Both these heavenly bodies are being utilised by the ruling elite for timing, and introducing their sinister plots in order to control the masses.

People like the three wise men, Nostradamus, Enoch, and the apostle John all have one thing in common. All of them were affiliated with the ruling elite and were privy to the astrological timing mechanism utilized at the highest level. Just to clarify any misunderstanding regarding this astrology. The Sun and Moon don't rule the elite or anyone else for that matter, no more than the clock on the wall rules our daily life. The ruling elite use the solar and lunar positions to dictate their ongoing agenda in order to increase their power. Just as we use the hand positions on a clock face to schedule our daily lives. However, the Sun is supplying a continuous stream of energy upon the Earth that evolves life in all its forms forward. So the elite utilise the solar and lunar positions as a hidden schedule in which to advance their plans, or carryout plots against obstacles in their way. Sometimes, it may be necessary for the elite to reveal to the public certain information about a future event.

This is merely to reinforce a thought into the human psyche or get the idea into the public domain. In that case the information will be deployed in some pseudo religious mystical manner similar to the prophecies of Nostradamus. Occasionally these are just decoys to keep the masses believing in the same old red-herrings. More chillingly is the fact that the ruling elite will bring these prophecies to fruition if it suits their agenda. It's all about gambling and controlling both sides of the coin, which the elite do with such precision. Furthermore, if the evil events described in the book of revelation do occur then most people will fall into the sinister trap of clinging onto religious doctrines. All crying the same mantra by claiming their beliefs foretold these disasters in advance. This is a simple but effective snare to dupe the masses further. A classic possibility is the second coming of Jesus Christ. If the elite actually succeed in manipulating this into reality, then it will be nothing more than a dictator masquerading as a pretend Jesus. Prophecies are part of the ruling elite's manner of control. It has to be presented in a twisted pseudo religious manner, otherwise, the hidden astrological timing mechanism would be revealed.

Nowadays people see through such prophetic trickery, but remember this is no fortune telling oddball at work here. The elite are serious people and actually know when and where an event will occur, because it has been pre-arranged by them well beforehand. The religious prophetic nonsense is just to keep the public believing in the cover story scam. However, it's not all perpetual mumbo jumbo prophecies that are churned out. Some spectacular incidents are actually executed. The planetary positions are used as a scheduled signal to the rest of the ruling elite brotherhood warning them to steer clear of a potential target area. Events like 9/11, the death of Princess Diana, and many others were orchestrated by the ruling elite using this very timing mechanism. Most occurrences are made to look like an accident or appear natural. The real culprits at the top remain well hidden and invisible from the public gaze.

The elite are not stupid and know that back in antiquity the unaware subservient population needed a timing mechanism to control their daily chores and lives. A public system was invented that would mimic the elite's superior heavenly method of scheduling; but at the same time cleverly mask the real secret. The public system had to follow obvious natural laws that the masses could relate to, but without revealing the astrological secret schedule the ruling elite use. What is this timing system that masks the astrological schedule? How can the ruling elite foretell the future? These questions will be described and answered in later chapters along with the techniques and blatant numerical evidence available that proves this is the case. Today we are being duped on a global scale by the ruling elite who continue to utilize this scheduling system. Essentially there are two versions of the truth. There is the real version that only the ruling elite are privy to, which is guarded with utmost secrecy. Then there is the second version which the mass public are indoctrinated into. This public version is a corrupt amalgamation of twisted lies, fairytales, decoys, and misinterpretations. Its sole purpose is to keep the public subservient to the ruling elite and for us to continually clutch at the straws of hope. In the next chapter, I will be describing some tricks and misinterpretations sold to the public that are dressed up as truth and justice.

CHAPTER 2

Manipulation Methods

Humans by their very nature have an inbuilt yearning to seek the truth regarding their existence. Most of us at one point in our lives have pondered upon its meaning, worth, and importance. Life is extremely short and many fear death as a journey into an eternal state of nothingness. What happens to us at death is not in question here, but those who claim to know that answer must come under suspicion. The major ploy the ruling elite have peddled upon the population is their apparent knowledge of what happens to us when we die. It was initially promoted and thrust upon the population by the priesthood in established religions. Pretending to have knowledge about death is an extremely potent weapon in trapping the masses into believing a convenient cover story. Achieving this gave the elite supreme power and control over the population. In reality nobody knows for sure what happens after death. This handy fact removed anyone from coming forward to prove the priesthood wrong or argue against them. An official authoritative body like the priesthood could convert millions to its way of thinking and assure its own supremacy. Suspiciously enough, all established religions claim to have their own unique version of what happens to us at death. Do you go to heaven, hell, martyrdom, purgatory, or into some other dimension? Who knows! However, one thing is for sure, all these otherworldly places have set conditions to qualify for entry. The religions that peddle this dogma are the very establishments that invented these conditions. Its endless rules and regulations; what is good, bad, right, wrong, moral, and immoral were created in order to set the entry requirements. Only by complying by their rules do you obtain a secure place in this otherworldly location. Hence, official religions control us by holding the population in a state of hope and fear. The mass manipulation methods used by the elite are sneaky and clever. The bulk of their success is due to our blind gullibility and our inability to spot a scheming conman. Thousands of years ago the elite managed to gain control over the population using nothing more than skilfully designed tricks secretly interwoven through established beliefs. Today we might call them confidence tricksters. Initially this worked for them, but eventually their methods became more elaborate and sophisticated. They evolved as the population no longer fell for their obvious scheming dishonesty.

In modern times the people who claim to provide answers pertaining to death have manifested themselves into endless sects, cults, and lunatic fringes. The main reason for these manufactured factions is to further snare the masses into the elite's web of control. The ruling elite have invented a whole variety of faiths for the people to choose from. Many of them appear to be in opposition, like Christianity and Islam. This is to keep the masses squabbling with their apparent enemy about what religion and dogma is correct. Meanwhile, the true underlying knowledge has been covertly hijacked by the elite. It isn't just Christianity and Islam that appear to be in opposition. Judaism, Buddhism, Atheists, Agnostics, and many more beliefs all fall victim to the same opposing dogma. Even worldly habits like drinking alcohol, smoking, gambling, drugs, popular music, careers, television soaps, and even sports are all modern day equivalents of opposing religious doctrine. It may sound ridiculous, but all are designed to keep the masses apparently happy and in healthy conflict with something. At the end of the day the ruling elite will sell us any gimmick that sidetracks us from the truth; no matter what shape or form it comes in. All these trifling pursuits are individual tailored niches designed to deviate the populace away from thinking or seeking. It keeps us content with endless trivialities, some of which seem important and crucial to certain people. However, all it does is simply maintain the ruling elite's prime position of control. People are so brainwashed by these manufactured beliefs that it literally rules their lives. Moreover, most people are happy to continue practising their fabricated doctrine, believing it is the correct thing to do. Doctrines are taken to such an extreme that wearing particular garments like turbans, skullcaps, and gowns are mandatory in most religions. If that's not enough then ludicrous rules like circumcision, arranged marriages, or facing east when praying to an invisible god are compulsory. A whole range of other practices are forced necessities to prove your faith to this unseen god. This is nothing more than manmade emotional and mental restraints preventing the brainwashed masses from escaping. It happens because children are indoctrinated into belief systems when they are young and vulnerable. Humankind has an innate natural inclination to seek a truthful and spiritual existence. This truth seeking mode is an inborn and instinctive quality we all possess. We certainly don't require manufactured religions to peddle its version of it upon us. No more than we need multinational companies genetically modifying our food and stuffing it down our throats, pretending it's an alternative healthy option. Nature provides our food adequately in rich abundance. It's all a devious pretence to dupe us into believing 'they' know better than nature. Whether 'they' have the backing from our government or not is irrelevant as I will shortly describe. Instinctively seeking the truth is a natural process for humans, but it must be coupled with hard facts, otherwise we quickly lose clarity. Sadly our inbuilt yearning for truth has been seized upon by devious groups who sell us 'their' version of it. However, 'their' version requires us to abide by 'their' rules, and we the masses meekly and willingly fall for it. These unscrupulous people play on our weaknesses. That weakness is our ability to believe in what we want to hear. If it tickles our fancy we get hooked into believing it. Before too long you are out there enthusiastically preaching and canvassing to convert the next batch of believers.

As I have said the elite will manufacture a variety of interests to dupe the masses into wasting their time on endless trivialities and chores. Whether these trivialities are religious or not makes no difference. Just as long as it diverts our attention away from the ruling elite's agenda. The diversity of religion has served the elite well, but the population has become weary of its dogma and craves new and fresh triviality to choose from. The advent of our modern culture with all its entertainment and glamour is the elite's new weapon of mass deception and control. Take your pick from the assortment of manufactured fads, all engineered to keep us entertained. Do you crave smoking, alcohol, sex, gambling, crime, excessive eating, pop groups, football, sports, high flying careers, business ventures, TV soaps, reality programs, or as I mentioned above one of the many religious belief systems now available? All of these life pursuits are skilfully designed to satisfy the masses into a state of mental vegetation. It's manufactured in such a way as to instil a false sense of achievement, attachment, and belonging. There's nothing wrong with most of these pastimes, but when they consume your thinking and ultimately become your religion then the trap has succeeded. Fanatically wearing a football strip or dressing up as your favourite pop or TV star is no different from wearing turbans, skullcaps, or any religious garment. It may sound extreme but all are a form of attachment to a strong belief in a comfort mechanism. It may appear to give your life meaning for a period of time, but that's all it does. Its primary purpose is to divert your attention away from seeking the real truth which remains carefully hidden.

All of the above pursuits have certain factors and a similar basic framework in order for them to work effectively. It might seem obvious, but a scam is only a scam just as long as it continues to dupe the people. For this collection of swindles to be maintained they all must have an initial desirability to lure the masses. Desirability undoubtedly plays on peoples natural attractions. In the case of sports, television, and pop personalities, the dupe comes in the form of yearning to be famous, successful, or similar to the person you aspire to be. Even just wearing the same clothes as your idol gives you a sense of importance and being nearer your goal. These people generally perceive happiness in the form of fame and fortune. As for gambling, business ventures, careers junkies, they are duped by the lure of power and money. They dream that one day they will have the power and money to call all the shots. For the vast majority of those people it will never materialize into reality. People with this mindset thrive on the notion of control, but it's just another illusory scam the elite know works well on humans. The real power will always remain with the ruling elite. Habits like smoking, drinking, taking drugs, and eating excessively are many of the addictive forms of drugs now available. Many will disagree that eating excessive food is a drug, but consider how our modern manufactured factory foods are causing vast numbers of people to become obese. Without generalising too much, these drugs are designed to keep people chasing an illusory form of satisfaction. That's one reason why they are addicted. It generates a craving in the individual that has to be constantly fed. It gives the appearance of easing the stress and strains of everyday life. But, the stress and strains are all part and parcel of the same manufactured tricks.

I'm not trying to get philosophical here because that's not the theme of this book. The ruling elite have taken mild everyday pleasures and transformed them into addictive snares for the population to fall for. What was once a friendly pint with a friend has now turned into a severe drinking bout with the boys. Taking marihuana or drugs to alleviate the pain of an illness has been transformed into a snorting den of losers. Enjoying an educational program on TV is now an addictive brawl about bickering families on soaps and reality shows. A day at the races has now become addictive gambling at the casino, national lottery madness, and slot machines everywhere you look. There are even whole cities like Las Vegas and Monte Carlo dedicated to gambling. Starting a traditional family business in order to be financial secure is now multinational companies consumed by the accumulation of greed. Billions in annual profits are not enough for these monsters who own more wealth than some individual nations. Crime is no longer a necessary evil for poor families who have to steal bread to survive. Crime is now a global international industry and many pursue a career in it. Furthermore, these huge international crime syndicates are established and financed by the western countries who hypocritically claim to be fighting corruption. All of the above manufactured gratifications have been converted from everyday pleasures or necessities into addictions. Once a person is gripped by one of these addictions, then quitting is often an uphill struggle set by physical and emotional turmoil. Some just never escape. Even those who do escape innocently fall victim to another manufactured snare. One rule that has been extensively used by the elite is to subject the youth to these addictions. The youth are much more vulnerable to fall for these cheap scams and gimmicks than for adults. The youth today are increasingly subjected to more and more traps. If you manage to get them young you've got them for life.

For example, the one way to stop a child crying is to give them their favourite toy. The child may like the action man and hate the cuddly bear, or it may prefer the pram to the bike. It doesn't really matter what toy the child enjoys playing with; just let it decide which one it wants and miraculously it stops crying. The same scenario goes for the mass population. To stop them seeking the truth just occupy their minds with endless trivialities. If they don't enjoy a particular manufactured addictive pursuit then let them choose from a number of different fabricated varieties. It doesn't matter which one they select because all are designed to divert their attention away from seeking the truth. Whether you become a success and reach the top of your sports, television, or pop career is neither here nor there in the eyes of the elite. You simply become the next role model for any further aspiring sports, television, or pop stars. The elite have no interest in such meaningless recreations. Their one and only purpose is to deflect people's attention away from seeking the truth and for them to remain in control. Whatever trap has duped you; ask yourself a couple of questions. Does this habit give me a false sense of happiness or belonging? Do I continually pay excessive amounts of money or taxes to feed this habit? Does the advertising industry portray it in a positive or artificial light? No doubt the answers will be yes to these questions.

Astrology, tarot cards, crystal balls, rune stones, I Ching, and other similar practices and methods have also been altered or manufactured to dupe the masses. Obviously the New Age community and believers of these so called ancient traditions will argue to the contrary. Then again, everybody who holds a belief or dogma will defend their way. Seeing such trickery for what it is eliminates the conflict that the ruling elite initially orchestrated for us to engage in. These fortune telling or guidance techniques rely on a very simple but cleverly disguised trick to survive. It's this mechanism that I want to describe to you here.

Clairvoyants predict or give advice on everyday subjects concerning issues like love, work, finance, and health. These common topics are selected because they affect everyone at numerous stages in their life. It's a matter of fact that these four areas concern all of the population no matter who you are. All of us are worried about our health. We all have to earn money in order to survive. We all crave love and friendship in one form or another to provide meaning and happiness in our lives. It isn't surprising that clairvoyants select such widely applicable themes to focus on. Most clairvoyants take educated guesses based upon a client's reaction, feedback, and gestures to certain loaded questions. They are merely weighing up whether a client has good or bad health, is fortunate or unfortunate in financial matters, or has been successful or unsuccessful in love. The client unwittingly provides the clairvoyant with vital information for an accurate assessment to be interpreted. Body language, facial reactions, and gestures say volumes in reply to a loaded question.

For example, if the client was a healthy young woman then the clairvoyant would be reading her reactions to certain questions pertaining to love. Since she is young and apparently healthy there is no need to focus on the topic of health. She may not be wearing a wedding ring, which indicates she is single and is concerned with her love life. She may be dressed in line with the latest fashion, which would suggest she socializes and has friends and acquaintances. Otherwise, if she was a recluse she would be attired in something more dull and unfashionable. This may be an extremely simplistic method of deduction, but this is what clairvoyants analyse in clients. Most young women are naturally obsessed with the subject of love and it doesn't take much to deduce certain answers. If on the other hand, the client was an old woman then health might be the key issue for the clairvoyant to home in on. It's all a matter of making an educated guess to establish why the client is calling. Rather than the clairvoyant guessing wrong, he or she will throw out several possibilities on the four areas mentioned above. For example, after the tarot cards have been spread out on the table, the clairvoyant may see a possible illness on the cards. If the client pauses and looks a little perplexed then the clairvoyant will quickly change the phrase. "Perhaps it might be a family member that's ill?" The client may respond and agree that her grandmother has a heart problem. It's amazing the clairvoyant has mysteriously deduced from the cards that the client's grandmother is ill. But this is nothing more than a simple trick. Everyone has an older family member who will or has been ill at some point. Notice how the clairvoyant puts forward a question about an illness but has the option to play the outcome in two different ways. If the client isn't ill then the clairvoyant has the opportunity to redirect the possible illness onto another family member. In this case it was the grandmother. The clairvoyant simply asks a question and the client innocently supplied the necessary clues for the fortune teller to redirect the reading. If it transpired that the client and her family members were not ill then the clairvoyant will suggest that the illness may be a future event. This too is another cleverly designed trick because unfortunately a member of your family will eventually fall ill. That's life, not fortune telling. Having this ability to cover both sides of the argument is achieved by the way certain questions are phrased. The reading is then directed according to the information and answers received. No fortune telling here just calculated trickery.

In fact the four issues mentioned above are manoeuvred during the entire reading in this very manner. The clairvoyant will put forward questions pertaining to love, health, finance, and work pretending the cards are mysteriously in charge. Depending on your response, the clairvoyant will divert and weave the reading in the devious method described. They will read each issue simultaneously, merging and moving the answers to suit the circumstances and feedback from the client. One major rule is to utilize the ability to provide an answer for all possible outcomes. They may even throw in some common names like John, Jim, Elizabeth, or Margaret, hoping they strike lucky. This gives the appearance of telling the future when in fact it's nothing more than guess work and trickery. In fact most clairvoyants actually believe the tarot cards can indicate human personalities and read the future. They are unaware of the subtle devious tricks the manuals and textbooks employ when teaching them their art. Their subconscious minds believe what it wants to, but this is nothing more than subtle brainwashing. Similar techniques are employed in most beliefs and religions.

The art of redirecting answers in two different directions is nothing new. It happens in all of these ancient prediction practices. For example, there is an unknown factor in the act of flipping a coin. Nobody knows if the outcome will be heads or tails. Whether you opt for heads or tails is irrelevant. To ensure the success of the coin flip you have to opt for both heads and tails. Clearly this would be cheating and defeats the purpose of flipping the coin in the first place. Opting for both sides of the coin is the hoodwinking that occurs in fortune telling or guidance practices. However, it's disguised by many layers of persuasion and double meanings. I have heard many people say that astrology is simply there to offer assistance and it doesn't predict the future as such. While others staunchly support that astrology is almost pin point accurate and can not be refuted. This apparent contradiction is a clue to understanding the swindle.

For example, a person may be born at a particular time when the planetary positions are situated in such a way that makes them vulnerable to overspend. According to astrology this would be a permanent blueprint marked upon their nature at birth by the planets. Therefore, during that person's lifetime they would be prone to overspend whenever certain planetary conditions arise. Those conditions are obviously primed when a tempting situation to spend crops up, and when the planets are situated appropriately. If it transpired that a person overspent on a particular weekend when the conditions were ideally suited; astrologists would declare success, asserting the planets do actually impact upon human beings. However, if the same person was merely tempted to overspend, but refrained through their own self will; astrologists would still declare success, claiming they got it half correct and prevented their client from overspending by warning them beforehand. Alternatively, what if the person wasn't even tempted to overspend on that particular weekend? In this situation astrologists would still argue the planets are merely for guidance in our lives and nothing is set in stone. Moreover, astrologists would state that we have ultimate control in our lives and the planetary positions are just highlighting probable outcomes.

As you can see providing an answer to every possible outcome is a valuable and subtle trick of the trade. Clairvoyants, fortune tellers, and the like will always select topics of universal interest that affect everyone. Love, health, work, and finance, are the common theme points. Notice in the two examples above how answers can be manipulated to suit the reader's interpretation. This simply gives the illusion of foreseeing the future when in fact they are covering both sides of the coin.

This kind of devious manipulation occurs in miracle healings too. I'm not refuting every specific case of healing, but the mass media broadcasts from TV evangelists fall into this scheming category. The same stage managed interpretation that directs astrology and fortune telling is also used by TV miracle healers. Just on a much larger scale. When a gullible person has just received a convincing tarot card reading they leave feeling optimistic, upbeat, and strangely believing in some hidden omnipotent power. A gullible person doesn't necessary mean they are stupid. It simply implies they have fallen for the subtle trap cleverly peddled upon them. Remember, it comes in many different forms. What do you imagine happens when a so called long-suffering cripple steps up in front of a TV evangelist? A Massive audience is watching and the television cameras are rolling. The pressure to be a believer must be immense. They were probably hardened believers initially, even before they got selected to appear on stage. Assuming the whole thing is not rigged from the start, which I suspect it is. Even the medical profession with all its expertise and technology can't heal these poor souls. Suddenly, some bloke in a white suit with grey hair heals the cripple with a relaxed wave of his hand. Amazing! Or should I say a miracle? No it's a con. If an evangelist healer has the ability to cure cripples with the wave of a hand then surely he would visit every hospital in the land curing the sick. The man would literally be a global hero. Sadly to say it's all a staged illusion designed to appeal to believing minds who will not question. They believe what tickles their fancy. Some would argue that the miracle only works for believers and not for non believers. But, I would rephrase this and say that the believers are the ones who fell for the trick in the first place. This is why people believe tarot card readings, because they fail to see the obvious scam I have described above. Therefore, they conclude that the tarot cards must work. This is what takes place at so called miracle healings. Remember, believers in a particular concept or dogma will not question or doubt their beliefs. It's a powerful trait all humans possess. Even the few who appear with genuine illnesses may walk away feeling encouraged, positive, and believing more strongly in some divine power. But this is no different from walking away feeling upbeat after a tarot card reading. It's just set on a much grander scale. It's nothing more than a feel good factor jazzed up on a stage show. These ill people no doubt had a strong belief beforehand which encouraged a kind of short-term placebo effect. Don't get me wrong because there's nothing immoral about feeling good or positive. I just don't like the idea of luring ill and innocent people into believing dogma in return for granting them a bit of optimism in their life. That should be free. It certainly doesn't require a trumped up religious stage show to give people a positive mentality in their lives. The ruling elite will repackage and sell any old trash to the masses if it fools them. These stage show TV evangelists are no more than paid agents peddling another artificial truth. (Lie!)

All this double or even triple meaning occurs in the most important areas of our lives. What more important topic is there than democracy, the very system of ruler-ship. Most people will agree that democracy is an overall fair system that governs our complex politics. However, the western version of democracy that most of us believe in is just another invented scam. It's no different from the old religious system that tricked and enslaved the population years ago. For example, which is the odd one out between: Christianity, Judaism, Islam, or Democracy? The obvious answer would be to opt for democracy, because it is non religious. In truth there is no difference. All four demand a percentage of money from its subjects in the form of taxes or semi-forced donations. All four have a ruling hierarchy called the priesthood or politicians who make decisions on behalf of the masses. All four impose rules and regulations from a religious or law book upon the population without their prior agreement, (i.e. Bible, Torah, Koran, or the Law). All four claim to stand for the benefit and welfare of humankind as some sort of custodian of justice. And finally, all four persuade the masses to follow a leader like Jesus, Moses, Muhammad, President, or Prime Minister, who claims to have the right to make major decisions for us all. Western democracy is repackaged religion designed to appeal to the masses. I find it absolutely astonishing that we see ancient civilisations and cultures as naïve for falling for such religious deception. Incredibly we too fall for the same bag of tricks today. The only alteration is that the scam has been repackaged and re-branded under different names. It's just all jazzed up to look and feel modern.

The so called democratic system we have in place today is not as watertight as we might imagine. We have several hundred elected politicians who are supposed to represent the general public in their respective constituencies. They claim to speak on behalf of the population and represent democracy. But how often do you actually see your local elected politician who is paid for by our taxes? Let me take a wild guess. Once every four years when his or her job is on the line? Furthermore, most of them are unable to make a personal appearance. Instead, they send out candidates to drop endless leaflets through your door promising everything under the sun. Once the election is over we never hear from them again. Their interest has mysteriously disappeared like the invisible man. These are the very politicians that receive a fat salary from the taxes we pay. Or should I say, the taxes extorted from us whether we like it or not. Very few of our politicians have the bottle to even speak the truth. Most of them utter endless spin, double meanings, and distortions in an attempt to win approval to become Mr. or Mrs. Popularity.

Most people would automatically assume that western democracy is a superior way to govern society, rather than a religious priesthood imposing rules from the Bible, Koran, or Torah. However, the thousands of laws that govern our western society are imposed upon its subjects in a similar fashion. Just think about it for a minute. Has any elected politician ever asked your democratic opinion when passing any of the thousands if not millions of laws imposed upon the citizens of this country? The answer is definitely no! Yet these laws are continuously repeated and rammed down our throat with conviction as though it were superior justice. These rules are forced upon the public under the banner of democracy, yet none of us were consulted regarding such laws. This is all supposed to pass for democracy, and unbelievably the masses enthusiastically support and fall for it. True democracy is when everyone has a vote on all issues affecting them. Rules and regulations should only be imposed upon the masses if the masses vote for it. Once a rule or law is forced upon the masses without their say then the word 'fascism' rings a bell. Why are people so easily deceived by such trickery? It's because the system has been cleverly designed to condition the human mind. Furthermore, we have all been born and nurtured with the concept that democracy stands for fairness, justice, and the majority. Few of us really stand back and take an objective view and see it for what it actually is.

It's all repackaged fascism disguised as democracy, or in other words, it's the same old wolf cloaked in sheep's clothing. The fascist ruling elite will govern us by force whether they masquerade as politicians or the priesthood. It doesn't matter to them because in reality they are just maintaining their position of power. They continuously lie and adapt in order to survive in control. Essentially three types of governments exist. The first is an outright dictatorship, where everyone is forcibly ordered how to live and work whether they like it or not. These dictators are everywhere, and it is sheer luck if you end up with one that's compassionate towards its subjects. The second type is a democracy where the entire population vote on all laws imposed upon them. Whatever the majority vote for should automatically become law. Sadly to say this system of true democracy does not exist anywhere on earth. The third type of government is a dictatorship disguised as a democracy. This ingeniously designed system rules our western world today. For this breed of government to survive it is crucial for the elite to constantly hoodwink the population into believing its version of democracy. Therefore, some elaborate schemes are invented to prevent the people seeing through the endless lies and scams played upon us. If the mass population could wake up and see the twisted dictatorship manipulating us all, then a western world rebellion would occur. Until then, our lives will be controlled and manipulated like the pawns on a chess board.

All politicians desire public support. This could easily be achieved if they just decided to tell the truth. It's not difficult for them to be honest and implement what the majority of the public actually want. It's called democracy. Why then do vast numbers of cabinet politicians constantly lie to the electorate? They simply lie because they have something to hide. This is the reason why the public are so embittered with today's so called representatives. Politicians are not accountable to the population even though this is what we are led to believe. In reality they are knowingly or unknowingly accountable to their higher masters; the ruling elite. Therefore, they continually peddle convincing lies to keep us in the dark.

Some may argue that the hundreds of politicians sitting in the House of Commons do represent the population. After all it was we the public who voted them in. However, when a politician votes for this or that law, how many actually consider what the mass public might agree or disagree with? It's impossible for any politician to know, because the population has never been consulted. Therefore, all politicians sanction or oppose laws based upon their own personal opinion. Most simply believe if this specific law is beneficial for them then it should be for everyone else. Even the politicians who genuinely vote for the welfare of the masses may be honourable in their judgement. Nevertheless, their decisions are still based upon self-centred judgements. In other words, it's all based upon guesswork and assumptions and not democracy from the people. Fobbing the public off with personal opinions disguised as democracy is nothing more than fascism dressed up. Moreover, the real decision making in politics happens at cabinet level. Cabinet ministers are selected to their posts, not elected. True they are initially voted into a particular constituency by the public. However, party politics orders them to adhere to the party line rather than voting for what the majority of the public want. Swaying from the party line gets them ejected from a cabinet post which they have worked and grovelled for all their lives. Notice when a cabinet minister announces a policy they tend to bolster it up with opinion polls. This is an effort to convey a sense of democracy. Opinion polls are based on an extremely small sample of people. About a thousand random people are asked in the street their views about a particular policy. Normally the questions are loaded so that a desired answer can be extrapolated and interpreted to suit the political agenda. Therefore, the results of opinion polls are manipulated to favour the party line and certainly don't reflect the true mass democratic view. (Both sides of the coin again). The simple solution would be to ask everyone directly whether they wanted a specific law introduced or not. Whatever the majority voted for should automatically become law. Although, this will never happen while a concealed dictatorship is in place. If this type of behaviour occurred in a foreign dictatorship then our politicians would be the first to cry corruption. These are some of the common snares utilised by many politicians, reporters, analysts, and so called experts. They continually blend together a mixture of pretend democracy, facts, and personal opinions to dupe the masses. Therefore, the overall result is anything but democratic.

So called modern democracy is just an enhanced version of the old manufactured religious priesthood. Hundreds of years ago the priesthood needed churches to promote their version of truth (lies) to the people. This was achieved by constantly repeating the same old religious mantra over and over again. People were forced to congregate together and listen to such contrived stories supposedly for their benefit. This method of forced teaching could not happen today because people would simply rebel. The good news is that people are slowly but surely beginning to see the scam for what it is. However, the elite have a much more sophisticated technique in place today. It's called the television set which now sits in the corner of almost every home. This innocent little box has more power than you imagine. Notice even in poor countries where work and food are scarce, a television set will not be far of. The television is the new church in which to preach from. This is the elite's new indoctrination machine. The masses don't even have to travel or congregate to hear the same old mantra anymore. The new pew is the sofa or armchair. The new preaching clergy are now television presenters, celebrities, sports personalities, and news casters. The cleverly disguised hierarchical priesthood have now positioned their church in the corner of every home. Sneakily infiltrating the masses at this level almost guarantees control over them. Instead of repeating the same old religious dogma that fooled the masses before, they now sell any gimmick that dupes the people. There is an assortment of manufactured trivialities and interests to choose from as I have described above. Have you ever observed how modern television is presented? This fantastic invention has the capability to educate, inform, and remedy the injustices in the world. In reality it is used to broadcast incessant worthless programs designed to appeal to instincts rather than reason. In one form or another it advertises a whole host of addictive pursuits all cloaked under the banner of entertainment. It glorifies war, violence, and torture; again all hidden under the same form of camouflage. The manner of presentation and actual content of most programs on television are broadcasted in a detrimental, meaningless, and hollow manner. Don't get me wrong because there are many programs worthwhile and educational. However, in today's squabbling competition for ratings, these quality programs are few and far between.

Hopefully in this chapter I have described some of the subtle tricks utilised by the people in power. However, this merely scratches the surface, and the degree and sophistication of control is astonishingly vast. The main theme of this book is undoubtedly the ruling elite and how they operate. But it's crucial for the public to understand or even consider the mechanisms of power pulling the strings. The institutions of power that call the shots today were the same outfit that called the shots thousands of years ago. It's the same invisible agents of control hiding under the disguise of different names and costumes. The global elite!

CHAPTER 3

Elite Knowledge

The whole political system is similar to an Olympic baton race. It appears that several independent runners are participating in a competition. The public are all cheering and supporting their favourite runner. The individual athletes concerned might even be attempting to boost their own careers. But in reality all the athletes involved are running in just one race. Each one passing the baton onto the next runner until the race has finished. This parallels our present day political party system perfectly. There has only ever been one government, just as there is only one race. No matter what party wins, the race continues all the same. An added sting in the tail is that the public believe the baton race is for their benefit. If this were true then most of our social and financial problems would have been well and truly remedied by now. Just think about how long our so called democratic system has been in place. Still, not even the simple issues in society have been resolved yet. What on earth are our politicians doing? The same old problems continually remain in place under various masquerades to keep each generation voting for the next popular party. Each generation falls for the same bait hoping their particular party will provide real solutions to humanity's problems. Unfortunately, this will never happen because the political system is answerable to the ruling elite and not the public. The government agenda is like a formula one race; the public might get to choose the driver but the race and its outcome are controlled by people in power.

I remember while I was on holiday several years ago seeing a couple of street magicians performing a trick for the public. It was the old three cup and ball routine. The performer randomly shuffled three cups around on a table with one ball hidden beneath one cup. His colleague had to guess which cup the ball was under in order to win money. Miraculously he gets it right nearly every time. Even several members of the public come forward placing their money down eager to have a go. Amazingly, they too win, and appear astonished at how easy it all is. These people were obviously stooges strategically placed in the crowd. All this was orchestrated to lure a genuine member of the public into putting his or her money down thinking it is an easy win. Once this happens the poor member of the public disastrously loses. "How can that be?" All the stooges cry, absolutely shocked at the defeat and encouraging the person to have another go. Any objective bystander could see through the scam instantly. However, once you get subtly roped into the trick your objectivity mysteriously disappears. Again, this is how our political system works. We have all been hooked on the scam from day one. So we fail to see through the obvious swindles anymore. This is the main problem with our western political system. The public have become so complaisant and are constantly engaged in the trap. Therefore, we find it almost impossible to be genuinely objective anymore, and fail to see the scam for what it is.

The whole media industry is another noticeable fraud. A large part of the mass manipulation undoubtedly is fed to us via this industry. Have you ever noticed how certain mainstream media topics are tackled and debated? I recently listened to a discussion on a popular radio station regarding crime. The presenter questioned two so called experts, who were invited onto the program to comment on the subject. Each expert argued their case with rehearsed lines putting forward opposing viewpoints. Whatever one proposed the other had a conflicting opinion. The bulk of their points were all based upon their own selfish beliefs. Furthermore, it was all dressed up with elaborate terminology and twisted meanings to baffle the public. To further add to the confusion, the presenter welcomed the listeners to call in and express their own viewpoints. I understand the public should have a right to express their particular beliefs on topics like this. However, it doesn't matter how many opposing viewpoints are thrown into the melting pot. All this achieves is to demonstrate peoples varied opinions and beliefs on a whole assortment of issues. Broadcasting everybody's point of view shows the huge amount of contrasting opinions out there, but it leaves the listeners befuddled as to the solution. That's exactly what this reputable radio station did. The topic of debate was left totally unanswered. The listeners probably went away more confused than before; thinking what a complicated scenario it all is. Any radio listeners currently involved in a similar situation were forced to resolve their problems by going to the so called legal experts. These so called experts, who are normally unelected power freaks, make all the decisions on our behalf. They hide under the excuse that the legal system is a complex issue, which was conveniently and sneakily created by them in the first place. But these experts are just people like you and me. What justifies their opinion over ours? Remember, it's us who have to live with the rules and regulations these so called experts impose upon us. What right do they have in making major decisions on our behalf? Absolutely none! The public falling for their scams isn't a justification for them to continue. We have to start seeing through the trickery and understand it is all fascism dressed up as false democracy.

In almost every case the media simply wheel on two professed experts to articulate opposing sides of an argument. (Both sides of the coin again). At one level this might be informative and interesting. However, in most occasions the experts will simply convey their own personal opinions rather than hard facts. I'm not saying I have the perfect solution for the world's problems. But intentionally muddying the waters solves nothing and adds more confusion and corruption into an already wicked system. It doesn't matter whether the news report is on crime, war, elections, health, or whatever. All television, radio, and newspaper reports employ the same methods and interviewing techniques. The main reason for this is to continue fooling the mass public into believing its version of the truth. You can introduce opposing arguments for a billion and one different topics and it will get you absolutely nowhere. These social and political issues can only be solved by public referendums where the majority vote decides. In most instances experts are really not needed.

The entire assortment of institutions of power running our world today is controlled and manipulated using some of the techniques described. Institutions like the police, media, politics and the military are in truth the real interface between us and the elite. These institutions are the visible barriers separating us the mass public from the invisible hierarchical ruling elite. Although, the mundane people working in all levels of these departments are unaware of this. They simply continue doing their job believing it's the correct and moral thing to do.

The legal system is a perfect example of how a manufactured scam dupes the public. In fact this entire profession is a purposely designed intricate maze of rules and regulations, with the sole intention of taking away our right to choose. Most people get bamboozled when confronted by the legal system. The whole legal jargon and complexity swamps most of us in a labyrinth of apparently conflicting rules. But it was intentionally created that way from the beginning to ward off any challengers. The hierarchy wants to run the justice show exclusively and call all the shots. No rivals allowed please! This is achieved by engineering the rules and regulations in such a way as to absolutely bamboozle the public. Because we fail to understand the manufactured maze of deception we tend to cave into it. This ensures the elite stay in the prime position of control over the people. When a legal problem arises in our lives, what is the first thing most of us do? Yes that's correct we automatically head straight for the nearest lawyers office for help. Those expert lawyers are always there to help with such complex matters. How could we all survive without them?

Who else could guide us through the huge elaborate web of the legal system? Amazingly, the people who sneakily invented the confusing legal system are the ones selling us the solution to the problem. However, only on the condition we abide by their rules. The same rules they engineered to confuse us in the first place. As a result the lawyers make all the decisions based upon these complex set of laws. Laws that should have been decided by the true democratic vote of the people are now churned out and enforced upon us without our say. Furthermore, we pay for such treatment and timidly allow it to persistently occur. We are so conditioned by the bewildering legal system that we actually believe it is endeavouring to administer real justice and freedom. It cunningly conceals itself under the flag it proudly flies, which is justice and freedom, while at the same time perpetrates the complete opposite. It's the same old bag of tricks hiding under a multitude of complicated rules. We are effectively handing over our responsibility to the lawyers. This successfully takes away our right to make moral choices in our lives and deviously forces us to adhere to someone else's interpretation of justice. Justice and freedom are the backbone of morality. Take away freedom and justice then what morality is left? In other words the decision making process has been taken out of the individuals hands. This is all supposed to pass for justice, independence, and freedom. In truth, the legal system actually robs the masses of these valuable virtues. Some may argue that the legal system does win many righteousness battles and its failings are due to the complex nature of humans. This maybe true to a certain degree, but remember the legal system merely hides under the banner of justice as a camouflage. In order for this camouflage to remain successful it has to give the illusion of administering real justice. The system must impose real justice now and again, otherwise, its camouflage would fail and everyone would see the obvious corruption lurking beneath. So in many cases it probably does implement justice, but this simply keeps the public focused on the banner of fairness the legal system constantly waves. It certainly doesn't reveal the fascist monsters concealed behind the scenes running the show. They will always remain hidden.

Remember, most lawyers genuinely go about their daily business believing the legal system on the whole works. Bear in mind, they have spent years studying to become fully qualified in their respective areas of law. They are hardly going to throw in the towel and give it all up. Besides, a person decides to become a lawyer for the same reason a person decides to train for any other trade or profession. They don't realise the system is a manufactured scam. Most of them work in the area I described above which implements the justice to keep the camouflage intact. Therefore, they see the justice element being introduced, but not the handy camouflage it's providing. It's a sneaky trick but a true one.

Furthermore, it takes years to become a fully qualified lawyer and anyone not genuinely interested in this particular field of work will soon become bored rigid. In which case they naturally and conveniently drop out of studying and move on with their lives. Any potential rebel studying a law degree and wishing to change the system from within will soon be weeded out as an infiltrator. Most likely they will be allocated jobs that will not progress into positions of power. Even the odd rebels that do accidentally slip through the net will soon be recognised as a threat and will suspiciously find their careers unfruitful. On the whole nobody in their right mind would spend years studying a system that doesn't interest them. Therefore, the sorts of characters attracted into the legal profession are those inclined to support its methods and traditions. In other words you end up with an endless flow of willing participants eager to learn and follow the system unquestionably. Moreover, they all believe they are fighting for justice and freedom. Generally this state of mentality can be said of most professions. You will find most top professional institutions are organised and operate in a similar fashion. Furthermore, all these institutions of power are intentionally fragmented or compartmentalised to prevent anyone taking complete control. For example, somebody might be an expert in law, medicine, police enforcement, or even the military. However, nobody within these particular organisations will have complete knowledge of its whole internal workings. Each will understand their own individual expertise. In reality they are all just tiny segments within a much larger framework. A larger social jigsaw puzzle exists which the mass public are totally unaware of. It's the knowledge of this entire jigsaw puzzle that the ruling elite truly understand and control. In fact it was the ruling elite that invented and assembled the backbone of the jigsaw puzzle in order to steer and control humanity's destiny.

The legal system has been around for thousands of years and still an endless string of social problems seem to exist. If the sheer power and weight of the whole profession has failed to remedy humankind's problems by now, then when will it? The mass public are excluded in any authentic decision making process. They only receive imposed laws that are thrust upon them by a centrally controlled legal system. The whole system was invented to take away our right to decide and govern for ourselves. The system conditions us to automatically cave in to the so called experts. We the public continually succumb to their fancy jargon which totally bamboozles us; eventually and inevitably we surrender our natural rights. Remember, nobody has a monopoly on justice. Especially not an institution that implements laws without consulting or conducting a vote by the public it imposes such laws upon. A true sense of justice comes from within, and most people know the difference between right and wrong without passing any university exams. This should be the true prominent backbone of our justice system and ultimately decided upon by public referendums.

The whole ruling elite strategy is about empire building and the conquest of power. The days when crusaders invaded another country and fought for religious principles and God are well and truly gone. Fighting for religious ideologies and values was just a convenient camouflage to justify taking over foreign lands. Slaughtering the so called barbarians of these lands because they were ungodly people was acceptable. Why? Because the public were indoctrinated into believing it was the proper thing to do. They unconsciously yet naively carried out the wishes of the ruling elite. Fighting for foreign land and power didn't end with the crusades. The elite simply reinvented and repackaged the same old bag of tricks. This time they renamed it the Great British Empire. I hear many people say the British Empire is well and truly dead. Those so called proud colonial days are just a bygone era resigned to history. In some respects this is true, but, what exactly did the British Empire stand for? In fact the British kick-started the whole industrial revolution, along with modern economics, western parliamentary democracy, and of course the modern legal system. They also mastered the art of colonising far flung corners of the globe. They took the concept of international trade and finance to a whole new global level. All controlled from London of course. In its heyday, the British Empire was the modern and acceptable way of how to invade, occupy, and control foreign lands. People fought and died for their great Queen or King believing it to be righteous thing to do. The Empire was something to be proud of. The public failed to see the blatant atrocities being committed in their name. All because they were conditioned into believing their country was superior, and their government was doing the proper thing for humanity. In fact the exact opposite was true. Worse still, the underlying tricks and scams that were played upon the masses back then remain firmly in place today. To be truthful the British Empire never died. The same old illusion is still being peddled upon us today. The public fail to see the swindle because it has been repackaged and camouflaged to look and feel modern. The British Empire simply adapted and reinvented itself. It has merely changed its Victorian grandiose titles into modern day equivalents, like international commerce, multinational companies, globalization, free trade, share holders, and market economies. In fact the whole international business world and economics that we take for granted is what the British Empire invented and fought for. What exists today is a much larger global version of the old British Empire. If you thought the British Empire controlled a huge chunk of the globe back in the Victorian period, then what do you imagine it controls now? It's a pervasive cancer thriving in almost every area of our life. The whole global financial and commercial world is the huge monster that the British Empire has grown into. Humans are now on the cusp of being totally consumed and controlled by its influence. Its supremacy forces people and nations into absolute dependency upon the commercial and economic systems it invented. In effect it strips away all independence from people and continually cloaks itself behind the smokescreen of modernity. It adapts and changes like a chameleon in order to stay in control. Even today they still invade, occupy, and control foreign countries. The public seem to accept it all, believing it to be progress in our ever changing modern society. So never fool yourself by thinking these old religious, political, or ideological concepts have died. These concepts are the tools of control in which our so called modern world operates. The essence of what the British Empire stood for still exists, but under many different titles. It has many masks but only one face. It is the face of the hidden monster I am attempting to reveal to the reader of this book. Not just because of power, money, greed, or control. I believe the real game plan is for the conquest of the human soul.

What exactly are the ruling elite keeping so secret, besides the fact we are all akin to cows on a farm? I believe they are controlling the very mechanism that governs our natural evolution. The very process that directs our innate evolutionary advancement is being stifled by the elite. At the beginning of this book I described the sun as being the driving force that maintains all life on earth. However, this force not only sustains life, it created it from the elemental building blocks. The power of the sun has advanced life through many stages on a natural journey called evolution. Charles Darwin's theory of evolution is not entirely governed by the process of 'survival of the fittest,' or 'natural selection.' Although these aspects are in some part true. The real engine behind the whole process is the power of the sun.

Natural evolution, or 'survival of the fittest,' is not the haphazard hit and miss process we are led to believe. All species must progress through certain stages as they evolve from generation to generation. For example, trees and plants blossom in the spring and wither and shed their leaves in autumn. This whole process is governed by the yearly changing environmental conditions. Or to be more accurate the four seasons present on planet earth; summer, autumn, winter, and spring. Furthermore, these environmental conditions are regulated by the power of the sun. The four seasons come about by the varying degrees by which the earth is tilted towards or away from the sun. Take away the sun and all life dies along with the regulated environment that shelters us all. A flower blossoms in spring only because the light, temperature, (i.e. the sun) and external conditions are correct. The genetic make-up of the flower is pre-programmed to blossom when certain conditions are met. If a flower was sheltered in a false environment then certain conditions could be simulated to mimic summer, autumn, winter, or spring. These artificial conditions could be regulated to fool the plant into reacting to summer when in reality it was actually winter. The flower will simply respond to its genetic programming and blossom in summer or shed its leaves in autumn. So while in this artificial environment the flower might never blossom, because the conditions have not been set appropriately. Even though the flower is genetically pre-programmed to do so. Now human beings are in a similar situation. Our genetics are geared up to enable us to evolve in a natural manner just like a flower blossoming. The engine that supplies the driving force for all evolution is the sun. However, I believe the elite are stifling our natural path of evolution by keeping us in an artificial environment. In much the same way as humans can prevent a flower from blossoming by subjecting it to an artificial environment.

It is a well established belief in the scientific community that humans are the most evolved animal on planet earth. All other species are somehow lower down in the evolutionary pecking order than us. But this is where our naivety and ignorance comes in. True, in some respects human beings are more evolved, but in many other ways we are not. For example, the flower is oblivious to whether it's in a natural or artificial environment. Both the natural and artificial environments appear authentic to the flower, and it simply reacts accordingly. The flower is totally unaware that humans might be controlling its external conditions and shielding it from vital growth by simulated a false environment. Likewise, we as humans are unaware that our environment is artificial in more ways than we understand.

I believe evolution has advanced beyond the human stage level of development and, it has progressed onto its next natural phase. Humankind is not sitting on top of the evolutionary ladder as we would like to think. That position is currently occupied by the ruling elite. Humankind is deluded into thinking they hold that superior position, but we are oblivious of our concealed rulers. Humans sit on a lower rung of the evolutionary ladder with the elite very much above us at the summit.

The reader might be unaware that humans have an upper threshold to their understanding. The elite are far more naturally evolved than us and can tap into a wealth of knowledge well beyond our reasoning. This does not mean the elite have more advanced computers or technology than us. Having an up to date mobile phone or computer doesn't necessarily increase your awareness or understanding of life. For example, we have always been perplexed by issues like death, the meaning of life, the human soul, time, the nature of existence, and the universe. The reason why we fail to comprehend these profound issues is not because we are stupid or lack technology. It's because we are not genetically evolved enough to fully grasp such phenomenon. There is nothing mystical pertaining to these profound issues. We just perceive it that way due to our lack of understanding. To be more accurate, it is due to our lack of genetic evolution. Humans have simply not developed sufficiently enough to fully comprehend these concepts. Some might argue that the elite could bluntly talk face to face with humans and teach us the real underlying workings to these profound issues. But this is almost impossible. It's like trying to teach a cat how to operate and understand the workings of a computer. You might manage to teach the cat to press certain keys at various times, but that's about it. The cat will never be able to grasp the real concept of what a computer actually is. Never mind sending an email, surfing the net, or writing a letter on a word processor. As silly as all this seems it is in fact the case. There is nothing intrinsically wrong with the cat for not comprehending the workings of a computer. The cat isn't silly or stupid as such. It just doesn't have the mental ability to accomplish such tasks. The cats' nature and mental ability is a result of its genetic make-up. Even though the cat might have the inclination and motivation to learn something new, it would still be oblivious to the function of a computer. There is absolutely no way a cat can possibly learn such complex items and problem solving by simply sniffing around and piddling at things. For the cat to comprehend the workings of a computer it would have to evolve into something closer in line with human genetics. In which case it would cease to be a cat, and that clearly defeats the purpose.

Human beings are in a similar scenario. The elite couldn't just come along and teach us the real meaning to these profound mysteries. No more than we can teach a cat how to operating a computer. The actual genetic difference between a cat and a human maybe very small, but the capability differences are vast. Likewise, the same genetic divergence exists between humans and the elite. For humans to understand what level of sophistication the elite operate on, we would have to evolve genetically closer to the elite. In which case we would cease to be human beings, and that again defeats the purpose.

It is a commonly held belief that the more evolved an animal is the more ethical and moral values it embraces. But this is not necessarily the case. Just look at how humans have slaughtered and tortured endless people and animals throughout history. Humans are supposed to be the most evolved creature on the planet. Likewise, the elite are no more righteous or moral than humans are. They use and slaughter us in the same way we do with animals. Remember, good and evil exist in all species, and both these aspects can manifest in a variety of different ways. Just look at a lion or tiger hunting its prey in the jungle. The lion doesn't realise it is committing an evil act by killing another animal. It's just doing what comes naturally. Similarly, the elite are just carrying out what they perceive to be natural. Furthermore, the ruling elite not only have the advantage of being more evolved than humans. They also sit in a prime position that enables them to prevent human beings from developing onto their next natural evolutionary stage. The elite realise the potential power of the sun and know this is the real mechanism that drives evolution forward. It's this natural mechanism that is being tampered with in order to strangle human evolutionary growth. The elite endeavour to keep humankind stagnant on their evolutionary journey in order to continue monopolising control over us. This is why humans have been held back in endless conflict for millennia.

It would be natural to react negatively towards the ruling elite by seeing them as some kind of sinister evil enemy. But this is most certainly wrong. In the same way it would be wrong to perceive all lions and tigers as evil because they hunt and kill other animals for food. The elite use humans in a deplorable manner because it's natural to them. In the same way we rear cows in a field to supply a steady flow of food for us. We can hardly point the finger of blame at the elite when humans are committing the same atrocious crimes against other animals lower down in the evolutionary scale. If we don't like the medicine we receive then we should stop dishing it out ourselves in the first place. I believe the positive way to break free from the clutches of the elite is through peaceful non compliance. I don't just mean passively sitting back and doing nothing like some kind of vegetable. Killing all the lions and tigers just because they are killers themselves is certainly wrong. We have to understand that we don't live in an independent state or country. It's more like living in a state of dependency. We don't pay taxes. Taxes are taken from us! We don't democratically make our own laws. Laws are made and imposed upon us under the illusion of democracy! We don't decide to go to war. We are ordered into war by the same people taking our taxes and imposing laws upon us! We as a species have to let the penny drop and realise we are fully dependant upon the rigged corrupt system we call the so-called democratic west. The full extent of the scams and tricks played upon us daily are colossal. We are akin to cows in a field. The cows think they have it easy, but unfortunately they take it all for granted. Their food and shelter is supplied for them by the nice little farmer. Their medical care is provided for them by the nice little vet. Mr. and Mrs. Cow have never had it so good. Why on earth would they want to give up the good life? What would you prefer; living a life in abundance or getting kicked out into the big bad world to defend yourself? The answer appears obvious, but the cows don't realise they are eventually going to be food on a plate for those damn humans. Likewise, we think the democratic system is reasonably fair. But we fail to realise that we are just fodder for the ruling elite. In order for the cows to break free they have to learn not to become so dependant upon humans. Similarly, for humans to break free we must cease to be so dependant upon the corrupt democratic system that pretends to protect and serve us. So no more freebies for Mr. and Mrs. Cow, it's time to take control of your own life and see the system for what it is. It might be a massive physiological leap for the cow to make that choice. But this is the only way the cow will ever break free and naturally evolve for itself. This enormous step is a difficult hurdle to jump, but it will eventually lead to 'true' freedom and liberty. Only by looking back in hindsight will it grasp the real value and extent of its decision.

By breaking free from the system, I don't mean we all live like gypsies. There is nothing wrong with embracing a system that governs society. I'm certainly not advocating anarchy in any shape or fashion. A governing system that introduces laws for the people should be based upon a majority vote by and for the people. Not what a small minority impose upon us. Remember, fascism comes in many disguises. One veil it constantly yet successfully shrouds itself under is false democracy. It pretends to represent the people but performs out the exact opposite. We as a society should all recognize and understand this clearly; otherwise, a global fascist social structure will eventually dominate every area of our lives. It's an incessant cancer that knows no boundaries. Only true democracy by the people should rule the roost. Not some dressed up fascist party masquerading as modern democracy. This is possibly the greatest threat that has ever faced humankind.

Remember, the government does not own the country; they are simply elected to oversee and manage the nation's affairs. It's the collective population of the country that owns the nations wealth. Increasingly our society is being dictated to by unelected bodies imposing rules, fines, and regulations upon every aspect of our lives. For example, take the road system in the U.K. All vehicles on the road have to purchase a road tax disc every year and constantly display it on their windscreens. The total revenue collected from the road tax pays for the building and maintenance of the entire road infrastructure. Therefore, one would imagine that the public should own the very roads they have built and paid for. But this is not the case. In most areas of the country the government further charges road users extortionate tariffs to park their vehicles in towns and cities. The very same towns, cities, and roads the public have built and paid for. It's like charging someone rent to stay in the house they already own. Furthermore, road users in London have to pay for the privilege to drive and park in their own city. This is called a congestion charge. So Londoners get a double scam played upon them. The government doesn't own the country or even the roads; they are simply there to manage it. Our whole nation and infrastructure was built and paid for by generation after generation of hard working people known as the public. We the public collectively own our country, not the government. The government should bow down to the majority rule of the nation's owners, not the other way around. We are constantly informed that the congestion charge is there to ease congestion. Too much traffic on the road we hear. But since the introduction of the one way systems, bus lanes, and strategically placed road works in every town and city throughout the country, congestion has gone through the roof. I've drove in numerous towns and cities up and down the country and find myself forced to travel several miles around a one way system just to get to my location, which was only 100 yards away. What makes it worse; every other driver on the road is in the same scenario. Furthermore, any new driver to most of these town centers will spend at least half an hour attempting to find their destination which is only minutes away. Then once parked will have to pay for the privilege. Moreover, the total revenue the government collects in road taxes are funnelled into other areas that have nothing to do with the transport system. The government introduced the one way system, bus lanes, and excessive road works intentionally to create congestion. All this was cunningly implemented so that drivers would eventually be charged to drive on their own roads; supposedly to ease congestion. The sinister swindle is to finally microchip every vehicle on the road so that the government can monitor and charge the mass public 24 hours per day. This was their secret agenda from the beginning.

The whole decision making process in the political and religious structures are supposed to care for and protect the masses. But this deceptive veil of reality is a thin veneer fooling the people into defending the system. This political and religious facade constantly displays a Mr. nice guy image to keep us following like obedient sheep. It divides the mass population up into class distinctions in order to create a manufactured pecking order. Working class, middle class, and upper class people are all trying to climb higher up the artificial ladder of success. At the same time the masses are hypocritically clinging to their roots as a social identity. All these gimmicks just keep the population chasing false delusions.

One plague that has blighted society today is the endless crime in our modern culture. It is my belief that certain laws have been intentionally relaxed and new flimsy laws introduced in order to appease minorities. Remember, only a majority vote is democratic, not a minority. This is an indirect and deliberate tactic for crime to fester away at all levels in society. It achieves nothing other than preparing the perfect circumstances for crime to occur. It is disguised under an assortment of so called beneficial causes. The classic disguise is the human rights issue. I have nothing against human rights as such, but I believe it is being wickedly abused. The genuine human rights act is being immorally corrupted. This is a major factor that will help introduce a fully functioning police state controlling all levels of our life. However, this is a long term plan designed to slowly eat away at our liberties and freedoms. Just look at the case of the Brazilian man shot seven times in the head by the police in a London underground in broad day light. The Brazilian man was totally innocent and did nothing wrong. The police force responsible was charged with health and safety offences; while the actual police officer that pulled the trigger got of free. What makes this case even worse is the fact that the police were supposed to be working undercover and tracking a potential terrorist. The so called terrorist they were supposed to be tracking was conveniently sidetracked and swept under the carpet by the main stream news. This is the kind of abuse the government is constantly engaged in. An innocent man is tracked in broad day light; intentionally killed by the police by pumping seven bullets into his head at close range; and the outcome is a health and safety violation. This is Nazi Germany, S.S. style mentality.

Why would any government fascist or not want to introduce laws that promote crime? Surely this would be detrimental to their grip on power. There is only one motive I can deduce for such inadequate laws; it's has been intentionally designed to let crime run out of control. Once crime reaches an unacceptable level, there will undoubtedly be a massive public outcry demanding that something be done. At this point the pretend democratic government will impose a compulsory law on everyone, forcing them to be electronically tagged. That means every member of the public, criminal or not, will be watched and monitored 24 hours a day. Moreover, we the public will accept such intrusions enthusiastically, because it will be sold to us under the banner of security. If the reader thinks this is all science fiction nonsense, then just take a look at the number of criminals that are now electronically tagged instead of being jailed. While writing this chapter, there was a news report on the television calling for the police and some official bodies in the U.K. to be electronically tagged for our safety. It won't be long before law abiding citizens will be tagged and monitored like common criminals. The whole infrastructure for this kind of surveillance is already in place. It's just waiting for the green light from the government so it can be rolled out nationwide. This is one reason why ID cards and electronic chip technology is being broadcasted, encouraged, and pushed upon us at almost every angle. But the government will need a valid reason for passing such laws, which will effectively turn this country into an electronically monitored fascist police state. The public will only relinquish their rights and allow such blatant intrusion if a good reason exists. That reason could only be another attack on the scale of or exceeding that of September 11th. More than likely it will be something more spectacular. A nuclear or biological weapon exploding in a major city like London will fully sign and seal our fate to this global dictatorship. However, such an attack will be planned and orchestrated well before hand by the ruling elite. The atrocity will be blamed on a convenient evil scapegoat like global terrorism; the very criminals that are allusive and we never seem to find.

In most cases social crime is a result of vast inequalities within society. It's a battle between the haves and the have-nots. People who earn very little money turn to crime for a quick fix to remedy their overburdening problems or to feed their fabricated addictions. Quite rightly they should be locked up for their crimes. On the whole, the system intentionally manufactures criminals to keep crime ticking over. It achieves this in an indirect way. Vast amounts of money are generated by our taxes to fund top notch layers, investigators, and judges to keep us the public safe and secure. Remember, lack of crime equals security, and excessive crime equals insecurity. The government can only sell us the illusion of security if crime is rife in the first place. What they don't inform us about is the fact that they intentionally relaxed certain laws so crime will automatically fester away. Once crime figures rise out of control they sell us back the illusion of security by reintroducing new laws that will further erode our liberties. This keeps us all voting for political parties, hoping they will provide security for us. In actual fact it provides a mandate for them to continue to control us and take away more of our independence. These kind of devious tricks are being used in all areas of the political arena by our so called elected MPs.

The general population are constantly chasing dangling carrots in order to climb higher up an invented ladder of achievement. That ladder normally comes in the form of status. Chasing the dangling carrots and attaining status is supposed to give us security. In reality the ladder doesn't exist. We are all chasing an illusion of apparent success. We constantly work harder and faster just to keep our heads above water. The whole political, social, and religious structure that governs the western world has been carefully designed. Its main purpose, from its conception is to keep us all working and chasing illusory carrots. The one major carrot we are all controlled by is the fabricated paper version, known as money. We are totally imprisoned by this watertight fantasy and continually believe it will solve humanity's problems. If that were true then the planet would be a living paradise by now. Instead we have transformed the planet from a paradise into a massive concrete industrial factory. The masses have been enslaved by these financial chains and are running faster and faster chasing every penny on offer. In truth we are all working for the financial multinational empires that call the shots. They certainly do not want a paradise where society functions properly and people are free. Otherwise, their rule would crumble. It's time for humanity to break free from the subtle yet strong chains of control that restrain us all. In the next chapter I will be explaining the game plan the elite are pursuing, and why they are obsessed with ultimate control.

CHAPTER 4

Elite Scams

I believe the elite possess real knowledge of the fundamental workings of nature, life, death, and the existence of the human soul. However, there is far more to the story than this. The ruling elite haven't just been controlling humanity from the earliest times in our history; they have been in constant communication with us too. But this secret communication isn't just directed casually at any old person. The elite only communicate with certain influential groups who are privy to their existence and agenda. This might partially explain why numerous secret societies have been set up throughout the centuries. However, not all secret societies are in direct contact with the elite. Most have been purposely created to act as a decoy to give the impression a load of mystical mumbo jumbo nonsense lies at its centre. The best way to achieve this outcome is to intentionally fabricate a secret society with a whole range of pretend ceremonies, rituals, and various practices that appear genuine. In fact it's only a cunningly disguised red herring to ward off any investigators seeking the truth. This pretend secret society will even have numerous members all brainwashed into believing they possess some ancient hidden knowledge. The members will actually go to great lengths to guard the so called secret knowledge they believe is valuable. This actually gives the secret society an air of mystery and authenticity. It also lures any potential investigators down the wrong path. Most are unaware that it's all an invented hoax. It's all designed to distract people's attention away from the truth and lead them on a false trail. So in reality many secret societies are nothing more than invented lies masquerading under a mystery. That mystery itself is also an added lie to deepen the confusion further. Any outside investigator will soon uncover nothing but supernatural mumbo jumbo and quickly give up the chase. Inevitably, the conclusion from any investigator will be that secret societies are nothing more than a harmless bunch of eccentrics participating in strange silly ceremonies. This kills the prospect of any serious investigation taking place and puts everyone on the wrong scent. In that way the authentic secret remains hidden and the fictitious lies are promoted and accepted as fact. This is a prime example of how the elite muddy the waters to hide the truth.

Remember, a secret can only remain a secret as long as you keep quiet and tell nobody. Once you expose it then it ceases to be a secret anymore. Likewise, the true knowledge the elite possess can not be embraced by numerous secret societies, otherwise it would no longer qualify as a secret. It could hardly be a profound deep secret if they were all familiar with it. Therefore, knowledge of this magnitude must be kept safely guarded by a handful of loyal members using every devious trick in the book. Even if another secret society managed to infiltrate and steal this so called truth, what would happen? Would they actually understand the magnitude and importance of it? I mentioned in the previous chapter that humans are genetically less evolved than the ruling elite. This inherently bequeaths us with an inability to understand the truths regarding these profound issues. It's not because humans are stupid as such. It's because we are not genetically evolved enough to comprehend such concepts. These profound truths can't just be leaked out or stolen in the same way any normal secret can. How can you steal or understand something you have no knowledge or concept of? Therefore, having numerous secret societies provides nothing but a convenient camouflage that protects the authentic secret society. Furthermore, it creates an assortment of suitable wild goose chases for any busybodies snooping around. All this is simply designed to protect the ruling elite.

I said that humans are incapable of understanding the underlying concepts of the profound mysteries the elite are privy to. However, humans can still sense a threat when something isn't quite right. To this extent we are capable of grasping an answer to fit an unknown entity and deducing a workable theory from it. I believe this might have been the roots of several secret societies and may explain some of their strange rituals. It's not just secret societies that the light of suspicion falls upon. The institutions of power are the interface between the mass public and the secret ruling elite. The controlling level of all these institutions of power is undoubtedly the government. At the top level of government is where I believe the interface between the elite and these institutions of power rests. When I say the top level of government, I don't mean the regular members of parliament. I mean the secret service establishments like MI5, MI6, CIA, FBI, and so on. These are secret societies in their own right, and operate in a strict need to know environment. In other words, each section or department within these organisations has no knowledge of what's happening higher up in the chain of command. This is the ideal structure to operate within while shielding a vital secret. From this stance you can pretend to protect and support the public interest. The ordinary people working at the bottom rung of these organisations can't and don't question what's happening above. They simply continue to do as they have been instructed. Furthermore, all employees' sign the official secrets act which prevents them disclosing sensitive information or events that take place within such departments. Revealing such sensitive information could land an employee in prison, or worse still, six feet under. People who work in these areas normally have a boosted ego, which gives them a false sense of importance and superiority above the general public. They feel special knowing they have knowledge about something the rest of us don't. Nobody ever questions the very thing that makes them feel special or important. These are the government departments funded by the extortionate taxes continually taken from us all. And we the public can't question or have a say in what happens within these secret services. So there is no need to investigate endless secret societies in an attempt to locate a hidden agenda behind any of them. All that is required is to investigate the secret services. However, that will never happen, because our government gives permission for them to continue operating covertly behind the scenes at our expense. A proper independent investigation will never occur because this would be breaking our national security laws. You don't want sensitive state secrets being revealed and everyone finding out what corruption really goes on behind closed doors. A whole range of convenient laws exist that are designed and camouflaged to appear as justice and freedom, while at the same time accomplishing the exact opposite.

The real communication between humans and the ruling elite ultimately rests with the secret service organisations. At this level, true profound knowledge is exchanged, and experimented on. When I say experimented on, I literally mean that. I believe at the highest level of government, genetic engineering has well and truly been tested and researched. What we in the public domain think is state of the art genetic technology is merely a fraction of what's really going on behind the scenes. Remember, the only difference between us and the elite is our genetic make-up. To understand the elite is to understand their genetic code. I believe the secret services have been experimenting with genetic engineering covertly for many years at numerous top secret military bases. Through this experimentation they have discovered the true mechanism that controls the next stage of human evolution. Remember, the secret services are still under the complete control of the global ruling elite. Any genetic engineering advances will be for their benefit and not humanity's.

If the secret services have managed to create a genetically enhanced evolved human, then who knows what information they have extracted from it. In effect the secret services could have fast tracked evolution by purposely engineering a more evolved being covertly. Profound answers the rest of us are unconscious of may already be known to them. Theoretically, this would mean the secret services possess knowledge of the universe, the meaning of life and death, and the human spirit. More importantly, they will understand the true purpose and nature of God. Understanding all this will enable the elite to influence and stifle humanity's natural evolution further.

All this might sound rather far fetched, but in reality it's all possible. The technology probably exists in the public domain to achieve this level of genetic engineering. However, the laws thrust upon the general public prevent us from uncovering this level of sophisticated knowledge. The mind boggles when you imagine what secret technology the military have access to. It is completely naive to think humans are sitting on the highest rung of our evolutionary journey. Evolution is an ongoing process and there are many deep philosophical questions humans have yet to find answers to. These are the precise issues a species further along the evolutionary scale would understand naturally. I believe it's these very topics the secret services have sought answers to through their genetic engineering experiments.

Remember, good and evil exist in all types of species. The ruling elite are no exception. But what exactly makes someone good or evil? It's this good and evil duality I believe the secret services are exploiting for their own ends. Tapping into this vulnerability helps the secret services gather vital information regarding these profound issues. For example, imagine if the government had already genetically engineered a more evolved being than us normal humans. How could they guarantee loyalty from such a being, and how could they communicate with it? Without loyalty and communication from this evolved being the secret services would be unable to extract crucial information. Loyalty lies in a personal connection with the people and environment in which you are familiar with. Allegiance towards people comes from having a long term association with them. For example, most people are close to their family, friends, spouse, lover, or pets. The reason for this is because of long term familiarity. This long term familiarity with something or someone breeds trust and reassurance. Furthermore, the language you speak will be the language you were nurtured and brought up with. These are tried and tested methods. Therefore, the secret services will undoubtedly employ these techniques. In simple terms, I believe the government has secretly nurtured a genetically engineered being and educated it from an early age. This evolved being will undoubtedly build trust and allegiances with the people who have reared it. It will also undoubtedly speak the same language it has been taught from an early age. So the end result will be a faithful superior evolved being that can communicate using the language of its creators. I believe this is what really occurs in top secret military bases like Area 51 in the United States. In this way the government can constantly learn and gather information from these genetically engineered beings. Furthermore, once enough information has been amassed, a clear picture will emerge showing answers to these unknown profound questions. It also enables the government to understand the nature of evolution. The agents working directly with these beings might not necessarily understand this knowledge. To actually have a deep understanding of issues like these, one has to experience it. Nevertheless, the secret services will have a genetically superior being and loyal servant willing to fight for their cause. Furthermore, I don't believe the government has created one or two of these genetically engineered beings. I believe a whole underground city of them exists in places like Area 51.

People normally support and defend their family, friends, and principles in a crisis. They rarely stop to think what they are defending might be right, wrong, moral, immoral, good or evil. In most cases people will unquestionably guard what they trust and feel reassured by. This is because of familiarity. It might be a religious viewpoint, a way of life, a political association, or a love for a particular principle. Likewise, advanced engineered beings will respond in a similar manner. They will unquestionably give loyal support to what they trust and makes them feel reassured? Obviously in this case it will be their creators who are the secret services. Why don't these genetically engineered beings simply rebel and fight against the secret services that are manipulating and exploiting them? The straightforward answer is that you only rebel and fight against an enemy or threat if you know one exists in the first place. If the so called enemy or threat is masquerading as a loyal friend then a rebellion will not take place. These advanced beings have been kept captive and pampered from day one. They have no knowledge of the real issues outside in the wider world or realise their captors are exploiting them. From their viewpoint, the secret services are loyal friends protecting them from the evil outside. In the same way a child unquestionably trusts its parents.

The reader must understand that these superior beings have been genetically engineered by high level government agencies. The beings themselves have to grow and develop in the same way all other species have to. So they don't just pop out at birth knowing a vast amount of profound knowledge. They have to be reared, encouraged, and pushed in the right direction in order to develop this sophisticated awareness. In most other respects they can be easily duped and tricked in the same way humans can. Once these beings mature and develop this high level awareness and skill they will unquestionably divulge it to the very people they care and trust. Who might that be? Of course it's the secret services. The very people that have created, cared, and nurtured them for years. So over a long period of time the secret services have collated a vast amount of data on genetically engineered beings. This enables them to understand the true mechanism that drives the next stage of human evolution forward. This is how the interface between humans and the ruling elite operate.

Now if the reader thinks all this is extremely far fetched then just examine what is happening within the public domain. Even now scientists have mapped out the whole human genome. The genetic possibilities and potentials are mind boggling. Remember, what is taking place in the military sector is far more advanced than what we the public are aware of. Furthermore, it's not just these genetically engineered beings that are exploited by the secret services. It's happening to humans on a global scale. We are being exploited big time by the so called democratic governments who are supposed to represent us. The same trickery that has trapped these genetically engineered beings has also trapped humankind. It's this misguided loyalty that seems to be causing most of the problems for humanity.

For example, people decide to fight in wars because they are strongly attached to the values a particular country stands for. Ironically, in most cases they don't even have moral values or standards; they just follow orders unquestionably. Even well educated people will preach, defend, and fight for religious dogma for the same reasons. Our so called elected politicians will staunchly stand by their party views and principles, and very quickly go on the defensive when questioned. It's this patriotic yes sir, no sir, attitude and a mental blind obedience that brainwashes people into committing despicable acts. Of course, all this is defended as justice and freedom in the so called democratic west. Furthermore, the non-democratic countries commit even further atrocities, hiding under the disguise of religious dogma. They somehow believe god is on their side and support their fascist regime and appalling way of life. This is the mass arrogance that pulls the strings of power on a global scale. We the public find a niche of acceptability within this structure and allow it all to continue. Why? It's because we all have been born, educated, and nurtured within such a system and no longer see the evil that controls it. This exactly mirrors the situation these secretly genetically engineered beings are in. We actually believe the global democratic governments exist to support and help humans live a fruitful life. This is the pretext they hide behind in order to control us.

The reader has to have an open mind in order to take all this on board. I truly believe all this is occurring at high level government. The public have been deliberately used and kept in the dark regarding these issues. One topic that tends to leak out constantly into the public domain is the UFO connection. I believe the UFO scenario is an intentional experiment undertaken by the ruling elite to monitor our evolutionary progress. Humans are in a state of constant evolvement just as the natural world intended. The further we evolve along our natural path the more our genetics will develop and advance on its normal course. As a result we will come to understand and experience the workings of the universe and its purpose more clearly. However, the true global elite want to stifle humankind's natural evolution. They endeavour to prevent humans from evolving along their natural course and want to keep us stagnant. In order to maintain this stagnancy, our genetic evolution has to be held at bay using various methods. This is why we are being subjected to a whole variety of synthetic medicines, foods, and radiation sources. Not because it's healthy for us, but because it stifles our natural evolution. The fact we are increasingly being subjected to more and more mass produced junk in our daily lives must ring some alarm bells. Our invented social structure seems to be manufacturing nasty substitutes to replace all of nature's provisions. Just look at the whole range of genetically modified foods thrust down our throats now. Or even the assortments of medical drugs purposely engineered to mask the symptoms of illnesses when more natural remedies exist. Also the variety of radio transmitters all emitting a wide range of the electromagnetic spectrum upon us. It comes from mobile phones, television, radio, or satellite transmitters, and of course the overhead power cables that crisscross the whole country.

All this adds up to an ongoing assault on human genetics. Whether you believe it or not, all this must have some effect on our natural genetic evolution. The global ruling elite endeavour to repress human evolution so they can remain in control. So while this excessive onslaught on human genetics exists we will fail to progress naturally. If anything, we will develop along some alternative path that has been meticulously engineered. The ruling elite have to verify this alternative path in our evolution is progressing effectively, and isn't being obstructed. Therefore, an average cross section of human genetics has to be collected and tested to monitor how far we are progressing. Or not progressing in this case. To do this the ruling elite have to make direct contact with humans in order to conduct tests and take samples. This is why thousand if not millions of people across the Earth claim to have been abducted by aliens. The elite have to gather a sample a human genetics in order to monitor our progress along the evolutionary line. If humans are genetically progressing in a direction unsuitable to their agenda then measures are put in place to alter this. The abductees more often than not describe extremely similar encounters. This normally takes the form of an examination involving their reproductive organs. The majority of the abductees leaves with vivid memories of the whole encounter, and describe in detail the appearance of these weird alien beings. Strangely enough, all their descriptions concur. Stories eventually leak out through the press and word of mouth and ultimately a picture of a stereotypic alien emerges in the human imagination. This has already happened and is still taking place across the globe, yet the public still laugh at the notion of alien abduction. Ironically, the public will unwaveringly believe they are open minded people. This hypocrisy is part of the brainwashing and conditioning I am talking about. Humankind must eventually wake up to their blatant double standards.

Why are the ruling elite so interested in the human reproductive organs from abductees? I believe it's because this is the mechanism by which parents pass on their genetic information to their offspring. Everyone receives an even mixture of genes from both their mother and father. It's this combination of genes that produces a healthy child with an even blend of traits from both parents. This constant combining of genes from both parents through countless generations causes our slow evolutionary progression. Each generation can not genetically stagnate, because they are constantly receiving a healthy mixture of generic information. This ongoing progressive healthy mixture is constantly being monitored and hindered by the ruling elite. Evolution is a slow process, and it takes hundreds of generations before a real substantial tipping point occurs and progress is noticed. Humanity is on the verge of such a tipping point and a natural major evolutionary leap is imminent. However, it is being consciously hindered and redirected by our secret masters. For human evolution to advance forward, an uninterrupted mix of genes from both parents has to be passed onto the next generation. I believe it's this naturally splicing together of our parents genes that maintains us all on evolutions true course. Therefore, human evolution can not naturally stagnate unless it has been intentionally tampered with from an external source. That external source is undoubtedly the ruling elite and they are certainly altering our natural evolution.

I believe this is why genetic engineering has become so important for many governments across the globe. Moreover, biometric ID cards and micro-chips are slowly but surely being imposed upon us all. This will conveniently perform a national or global monitoring device for scrutinizing the genetic development of the population. You can see this genetic engineering and manipulation being manoeuvred in front of our eyes. The ID cards and micro-chips are camouflaged under righteous endeavours like, tackling crime, protecting your children, anti-terrorism, traffic control, or even tagging your pet. Human genetic engineering is also being subtly introduced into the public arena. This too is cloaked under the assurance of miraculous medical treatments or eradicating incurable illnesses. Even the idea of designer babies is being offered to the masses as a justification to legislate genetic engineering further. The media will undoubtedly play their part in all this by orchestrating a so called open debate. This is really just a devious way to soften people up to the idea of accepting the whole genetic engineering proposal. In fact it has been premeditated, prepared, and instigated by the top rank elite behind the scenes well before the public ever hear about it. Therefore, the public meekly accept it all as inevitable progress in an ever changing world. We are constantly being told to embrace new changes as a positive step forward for us all. Furthermore, we are advised by the so called experts to introduce new legislation to protect us from anyone abusing this genetic technology. This is sheer hypocrisy, because the population is never democratically consulted when new laws are introduced. The progress we are being told that is inevitable is the progress that has been planned covertly to ultimately control us all. Holding back growth and development for the benefit of the whole planet is certainly wrong. A changing world must be decided upon by its inhabitants and not stealthily engineered from behind the scenes by the few.

It is no coincidence that the new ID card or chip technology is called bio-metric data. I will explain in the next few chapters why the metric system is so important. We seem to think that genetics is a recent discovery. However, the whole issue has been around for thousands of years. For example, nation has fought against nation to protect its unique culture and race from foreign invaders for centuries. In a sense this is a form of genetic or race protection. Traditionally a nation consists of a population with similar features, skin colour, and beliefs. Protecting a nation's culture and customs from foreign invaders has always been the government's primary objective. In effect, this protects and preserves a form of racial purity and maintains genetic stagnation, which avoids natural evolution. In other words, countries prefer not to interbreed with other nations because it would water down their own identity, culture, and genetic purity. A nation holds its identity sacred, and fights and dies for it in war time. It is no different today in our modern world. The public have been brainwashed into thinking these are antiquated concepts. If anything, it is very much festering away behind the scenes. The Second World War is a prime example of how governments were concerned with racial traits. Hitler was obsessed with the racial purity and superiority of the Germans and saw the Jews as somehow inferior. He foresaw a master race of Germans eventually ruling the world, and regarded the Jews as a hindrance or threat to his plan. Why did he consider the Jews with such contempt? Did that particular breed of people pose a danger so great that he had to exterminate them all? Perhaps the general public was fed a false propaganda story in order to do Hitler's dirty work. In those days people were less informed and more likely to believe the governments' official story. The public would automatically accept the official propaganda supplied to them and no doubt fought to the death for their great leader. The same mentality is rife today. This is why so many genocides are committed across the globe. And who receives the brutality from all these conflicts? It's the general public who are the pawns that take the rap in every occasion. It's the innocent public that get mutilated, raped, murdered, and tortured from the hellish conflicts that occur around the world. Meanwhile, the real leaders that start the wars are well protected from all these horrors. The public are being constantly used as a commodity to fight wars on behalf of these scheming concealed cowards. Meantime, they sit safe and sound behind the scenes orchestrating events in order to secure their agenda. That agenda is being manoeuvred by a hidden force, and we are merely pawns on the battlefield executing their wishes.

So Hitler was no different; he played both sides of the coin to gain control. On one hand he fed the public a convincing lie that they wanted to hear. The uninformed public believed the lie completely and supported their leader.

This secured their trust and loyalty, and as a result they were willing to fight and die for Hitler's cause. A campaign of fear and terror tactics kept any stray rebels in check. On the other hand Hitler and his henchmen were secretly plotting from behind the scenes. I believe his whole master race obsession was to prevent Jews and Germans from producing any offspring. This could not be achieved politically or peacefully, therefore, the Jews had to be eliminated. It wasn't that the Germans were superior to the Jews in the normal sense of the word. Humans are humans no matter where you come from.

For example, the wolf is the distant ancestor of the numerous breeds of dogs that exist today. What is more evolved, the wolf or any of the abundant breed of dogs that have sprung from the wolf? If evolution moves species progressively forward as we are led to believe, then the wolf must be less evolved than a modern day Chihuahua. But is that really the case; because man has tampered with the natural evolution of the wolf? He has effectively created a whole variety of dogs with unique characteristics and traits to please humans. If left to their own natural devices the wolf would have evolved in a totally different direction. We have purposely interbred these dogs to produce many different types of pedigrees. Each pedigree has their unique individual qualities and traits. Some features are pleasing and some not so pleasing. Similarly, the nations on planet earth are individual breeds of human pedigrees. All are attempting to protect and to propagate their own particular type of national breed. Failing to do so would bring about the extinction of that individual pedigree. Countries have been purposely created using similar methods of cultural interbreeding. This has inevitably diverted our own natural path of evolution. Just like the wolf's natural evolutionary outcome wasn't supposed to be a Chihuahua. Nations are essentially inbred pedigrees that possess unique individual traits. And like all breeds they tend to protect their own. Inescapably, this leads to squabbles for pecking orders and fights with rival breeds for power and control. Hence, the endless wars scattered along humanity's past.

Most pedigree dogs are afflicted with a unique illness or medical condition, which is indicative to that particular breed. It could be arthritis, a heart condition, kidney failure, and so on. This is not dissimilar to the many human diseases we see in the world today. Certain illnesses and diseases are distinctive to individual countries and cultures. This might explain why cancer and heart disease is so rife in the west and less prominent in developing countries. Most of our modern day living patterns are subtle attempts by the elite to sidetrack natural evolution. The further we veer from our naturally intended path the more nature will predictably kick back. This kick back is already occurring big time in the world today. It's happening in the form of a whole range of new exotic illnesses and diseases that are cropping up with regularity. Like Aids, cancer, mental depression, and a bizarre variety of obscure viruses. Even the general feeling of wanting to escape the rat race is the human body's subtle way of biologically kicking back. The more we divert away from our natural path the more violently it will counteract. Even the ongoing destruction of the planet will oppose with severity if we persist in resisting its natural course. Pollution, deforestation, the draining of raw materials from the Earth, and a mountain of useless waste will all have consequences. Continual earthquakes and natural disasters occurring around the globe is a result of the constant abuse to planet Earth. If we prolong these actions then it will unquestionably culminate in our annihilation from natural evolution. These are all inbred warning signs telling us that maintaining and protecting our manufactured lifestyle is a wrong and dangerous path.

Most of us react to pack instinct for guidance and answers to life, rather than following and trusting our own natural reasoning. We simply follow what has gone before. We fail to comprehend that the pack we follow is being deviously led to the slaughterhouse by the ruling elite.

Individual diversity is being eroded at an alarming rate. The further we go down this road the more we become a brainwashed society following the herd/breed mentality. In simple terms, the more refined the genetic mix an animal has the more medical problems it will inherit from the previous generation. Alternatively, the more varied mix of genetics an animal possesses the less medical problems it will inherit from the previous generation. The simple way to look at humanity is to picture every nation on earth as a unique particular breed of the same species. Just as we have many breeds of horses, dogs, cats, and cows etc. Now humans are no different. Nearly every nation on earth is an inbred entity that has matured over several generations. Eventually this constant inbreeding will begin to cause genetic flaws that will manifest in many different ways. This is the main reason we see so many illnesses and viruses around the world today. Some might argue that multicultural societies already exist, and this offers a genetic integration to balance national inbreeding. In some instances this might be correct, but I believe certain mixes of races are incompatible with each other. Integrating opposing polarities will only produce a clash of differences, which will result in conflict. This tends to have a detrimental effect on society rather than a beneficial growth. I believe the present mix within multicultural societies we see today are blatantly incompatible pedigrees forced to live together. The ruling elite are intentionally mixing these pedigrees together knowing full well they are unsuitably matched. Ultimately this causes segregation and conflict rather than a peaceful integration. We can see this happening in many multicultural societies today. On the other hand, certain mixes are highly compatible with each other and bring fresh blood into a species. A healthy mix waters down its inbred pedigree and negative inherited traits. In effect, it's like returning a dog to its wolf like state. In order to do this it has to relinquish its former self. Only then will it realise its natural wolf like qualities. Similarly, for humans to get back on track with their natural evolutionary course they have to relinquish their present path and all the inbred conditions accumulated over generations. The only way to achieve this; is for humans to integrate naturally with various races to water down their pedigree. This will ultimately return humanity on its natural path of evolution, rather than each nation clinging to its own individual pedigree.

So Hitler and the whole master race scenario was an attempt at protecting the German pedigree from an incompatible outside influence. I believe Hitler thought the German race could evolve into the elite beings with superior genetics. Beings instilled with superior genetics would naturally understand and be aware of the workings and meaning of nature, life and the universe. This knowledge would equip him to seize the reigns of power and take control of the world and humankind. That kind of knowledge will eventually become natural to all of humanity, but the general public is constantly being evolutionary sidetracked not to grasp it.

It is undoubtedly true that Germany was defeated in the Second World War. But the enemy Hitler was fighting wasn't the good guys battling for justice and freedom that we all seem to believe. The western allies, primarily United States of America and Britain, only played the role of the good guys, while Hitler played the role of the bad guy. It's a classic example of the good cop, bad cop scenario. Both are in cahoots with each other. They might not have been fully aware of this at government level. However, people higher up in the chain of command know how the puppet strings operate. This is primarily the secret service departments in prominent positions of power who subtly manoeuvre events from behind the scenes. During the second world war the US and UK governments were on a crusade to discover these profound secrets, just as the Germans were. There are no good or bad guys at the top. Both are controlled by the same hierarchy, and only give the outwardly appearance of being separate entities. The true game controllers are the global ruling elite who sit at the apex of power.

It is our biology that equips us with the everyday tasks that we take for granted. Even our understanding as a species is a result of our genetic and biological make up. Ultimately, our human knowledge is based upon who and what we are. We are what our genetic and biological make up dictates. We can only comprehend what our biological hardware is geared up to do. Anything beyond this we perceive as a mystery. Having knowledge of the mechanism that drives this forward equates with ultimate power. Evolution is the natural mechanism that is driving life forward. But the journey doesn't end with humans; it continues forward one generation after the next. The next development of evolution will naturally equip our biological make up with a more profound understanding of the universe. However, this leap in evolution has already occurred and this is the true nature of the global ruling elite. They have an insightful knowledge of the universe and its workings. Therefore, the celestial universe and its underlying arithmetic is where the next chapter is focused. It is from here answers can be found.

CHAPTER 5

Imperial & Metric

Just as the title suggests, the imperial and metric measuring systems that we use today is the topic of this chapter. I definitely don't want to bore the reader with endless numbers, formulas, and arithmetic. However, understanding the metric and imperial measuring systems is vital to deciphering the meaning behind the ruling elite's method of operating. Realizing where such systems originated from and its hidden function is the one major clue consistently overlooked. As I began researching various numbers, I initially thought I would be frantically running around in a maze getting nowhere fast. Yet, just when you least expect it answers mysteriously appear. The roots of our imperial measuring system dates back into antiquity and most likely was invented further back in a prehistoric era. Whereas, our modern metric system is regarded as a recent newcomer developed to make our life easier by counting in tens. Yet, this simplistic viewpoint isn't entirely straight forward.

For those who find numbers tedious and tiring then I'm afraid this chapter may put you to sleep. Nevertheless, it's essential to read on. In the previous chapter I said the ruling elite have two measuring systems in place. One system designed to be used by the mass population and the other secretly utilized by the hidden elite. In truth the two actually merge together to form one system, but can be viewed from two different perspectives. The mass population are taught only to see and use the visible surface system. The secondary underlying system remains subtly hidden and is only used by those who are initiated into its workings.

Nowadays we use a whole variety of units in which to measure. The inch, foot, millimetre, and the kilometre are just a few common examples. Many more units exist that aren't so familiar in our daily life. For example, the fathom, chain, yard, furlong, and league are just some imperial units very rarely used now. No doubt these units will be recognisable to some of the older generation, but even then the blatantly obvious is repeatedly overlooked. For example, we schedule our life by what we perceive as a modern calendar. One year contains 365.24 days. This is simply how many revolutions the earth completes on its axis in one year as it journeys around the sun. The year is further split into 12 months, with each month containing approximately 30 days. Additionally, we divide the year into four equal quarters to reflect the four seasons. Now the reader might be wondering why I'm stating such obvious facts regarding the yearly calendar. Well the answer becomes transparently clear when you compare it against our modern day measuring system.

From table 1 below, you can clearly see that the calendar correlates perfectly with our well known ruler measurements. It is my belief that one centimetre represents one day. In which case: 30cm or 1 foot = 30 days or 1 month; 61cm or 2 feet = 61 days or 2 months; 91cm or 3 feet/1yard = 91 days or 3 months; 121cm or 4 feet = 121 days or 4 months; 152cm or 5 feet = 152 days or 5 months; 182cm or 6 feet/1fathom = 182 days or 6 months; 213cm or 7 feet = 213 days or 7 months; 243cm or 8 feet = 243 days or 8 months; 273cm or 9 feet = 273 days or 9 months; 304cm or 10 feet = 304 days or 10 months; 334cm or 11 feet = 334 days or 11 months; finally 365cm or 12 feet = 365 days or 12 months/1 year.

These units did not come about by accident and were intentionally incorporated into our measuring system to represent the earth's yearly journey around the sun. Not many people were taught these handy numerical associations at school. Then again we were never educated to understand the true game plan the ruling elite have installed behind the scenes. At first glance units like the centimetre, foot, yard, and fathom seem to be ambiguous measurements that have evolved naturally through time. That's exactly what the global ruling elite want us to believe; that things evolved naturally without any premeditated intervention or meddling. In fact, the opposite is true; these units were intentionally invented.

As you can see from the table below, transparent parallels emerge when you compare our measurements with our modern calendar. I have omitted decimal points from the units below and rounded each number up or down for simplicity. These blatant numbers are all part of the hidden underlying system I'm talking about. It may seem obvious to the reader once it has been pointed out, but until then it remained cunningly concealed. The numbers below may seem like an interesting curiosity to the casual observer, but the correlations go much deeper. As we shall see later, this system is still employed by the ruling elite today.

TABLE 1.

DAYS	MONTHS	CM	FEET
30 Days	1 Month	30 Cm	1 Foot
61 Days	2 Months	61 Cm	2 Feet
91 Days	3 Months or ¼ Year	91 Cm	3 Feet or 1Yard
121 Days	4 Months	121 Cm	4 Feet
152 Days	5 Months	152 Cm	5 Feet
182 Days	6 Months or ½ Year	182 Cm	6 Feet or 1Fathom
213 Days	7 Months	213 Cm	7 Feet
243 Days	8 Months	243 Cm	8 Feet
273 Days	9 Months	273 Cm	9 Feet
304 Days	10 Months	304 Cm	10 Feet
334 Days	11 Months	334 Cm	11 Feet
365 Days	12 Months or 1 Year	365 Cm	12 Feet

The table above clearly shows how certain units based on the centimetre directly relate to our modern calendar, with one centimetre representing one day. This all seems straight forward, but what about units based upon the inch? How can the inch be integrated into the calendar framework? While researching various units and numbers, I discovered that the sun revolves on its axis in a similar manner as planet earth. Remember, from the previous chapters I pointed out that the sun was and still is extremely important to the ruling elite. It essentially represents the one heavenly god that created and sustains all life. Astonishingly, I discovered that it took the sun 25.4 days to complete one revolution on its axis. This 25.4 day time period might not seem significant, but it does when you consider that both 1 & 10 inches contain 25.4mm and 25.4cm respectively. No coincidence I thought. This undoubtedly meant that 10 inches or 25.4cm represented the 25.4 days it took for the sun to complete one revolution on its axis. Additionally, the fact that 1 inch also contained 25.4mm was amazing confirmation. However, why would the ruling elite divide 25.4 cm into 10 equal inches? Surely the 25.4 day revolution of the sun reflects the 25.4 cm contained within 10 inches. But what aspect of the heavens reflects this 10 inch measurement?

The answer to this division of 10 becomes clearer when we examine the sun a little closer. During the 25.4 days it takes the sun to rotate on its axis, it symbolically casts a sweeping light upon each of the ten individual planets. Similar to a lighthouse beam casting its light upon the sea. Eventually, the sun completes one revolution after sweeping its light across the ten planets. Hence we have 10 inches in 25.4cm, symbolically representing the 10 planets in 25.4 days. Therefore, just as one centimetre relates to one revolution of the earth, 10 inches or 25.4 cm relates to one revolution of the sun. The ten planets in order are; Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Asteroid Belt, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. Scientists believe that the asteroid belt was once a planet that failed to evolve properly, or was simply destroyed by some unknown ancient cataclysm. The remnants of this planet still orbit the sun today between Mars and Jupiter. Table 2 below illustrates the correlation between the planets and our every day measurements.

TABLE 2.

INCH	CM	PLANET	SUN/REV	DAY
1 Inch	2.54 Cm	1 st = Mercury	1/10 th	2.54 Days
2 Inches	5.08 Cm	2 nd = Venus	2/10 ^{ths}	5.08 Days
3 Inches	7.62 Cm	3 rd = Earth	3/10 ^{ths}	7.62 Days
4 Inches	10.16 Cm	4 th = Mars	4/10 ^{ths}	10.16 Days
5 Inches	12.7 Cm	5 th = Asteroid Belt	5/10 ^{ths}	12.7 Days
6 Inches	15.24 Cm	6 th = Jupiter	6/10 ^{ths}	15.24 Days
7 Inches	17.78 Cm	7 th = Saturn	7/10 ^{ths}	17.78 Days
8 Inches	20.32 Cm	8 th = Uranus	8/10 ^{ths}	20.32 Days
9 Inches	22.86 Cm	9 th = Neptune	9/10 ^{ths}	22.86 Days
10 Inches	25.4 Cm	10 th = Pluto	10/10 ^{ths}	25.4 Days

Therefore, each of the ten inches in our standard ruler symbolically represents the sun casting its light upon each of the ten planets as it spins on its axis. It takes 25.4 days for the sun to complete one rotational spin during which time it casts its light upon the 10 planets. This mirrors the 25.4 centimetres contained within 10 inches.

Most imperial units are based upon the numbers 3, 6, 9, 12, 24... and so on. It struck me as odd that 1 and 10 inches were both divided into 25.4 equal parts. It seemed like such an obscure number. There can be absolutely no reason for dividing both these units into such an odd and confusing number, unless it represented the spin of the sun. As I mentioned previously, the sun is the most important heavenly body in the sky. It literally keeps us alive, and without its heat and radiation we would all perish. What better way to symbolise an omnipotent heavenly God/Sun than to match its rotational period with our everyday measuring system. No coincidence.

We are now beginning to see that our measuring system is based upon the heavenly movements of the sun and earth. However, there are more issues to consider. What about our metric system? How do units like the metre and kilometre equate with the heavens? For example, there are 39370 inches in one kilometre, 39.370 inches in one metre, 3.9370 inches in 10 centimetres, 0.39370 inches in 1 centimetre, and 0.039370 inches in one millimetre. Where does this ambiguous number 39370 come from? It is neither imperial nor metric. It looks as though it were just plucked out of thin air. We are cunningly led to believe it evolved naturally through time, but it's actually designed to give the illusion of randomness. In actual fact the number 39370 is a carefully calculated figure relating to the sun and earth.

I have established that the sun revolves on its axis once every 25.4 days. Therefore, in one year it completes 14.38 revolutions; sometimes rounded up to 14.4 for convenience. Now, if I were to divide the 1 revolution the sun completes into 25.4 equal segments, then each segment would measure 0.039370^{th} of a revolution.

(1 divided by 25.4 = 0.03937)

In other words the sun revolves 0.039370th of a revolution each day. The number 0.03937 is actually 1 centimetre expressed as a fraction of 10 inches or 25.4cm. It can be confusing to grasp exactly where the 0.03937 number is coming from. Essentially it's the fraction by which the sun revolves on its axis in one earth day. Table 3 below clearly shows how these units correlate with each other.

TABLE 3.

DAYS	CM	INCHES	REV SUN 10th
1 day	1 cm	0.3937"	0.03937th
10 days	10 cm	3.937"	0.3937th
25.4 days	25.4 cm	10"	1 rev
100 days	100 cm	39.37" (1 metre)	3.937 rev
254 days	254 cm	100" (2.54metres)	10 rev
365.24 days	365.24 cm	144" (12 feet)	14.4 rev
100'000 days	100'000 cm	39370" (1 km)	3937 rev

- Starting from the top row of table 3 above we see that 1 day is represented by 1cm. Furthermore, 1cm is 0.3937 of an inch and the sun has spun 0.03937th of a revolution in one earth day.
- On the second row, 10 days is represented by 10cm. Now 10cm contains 3.937 inches, and in 10 days the sun has spun 0.3937th of a revolution.
- On the third row, 25.4 days is represented by 25.4cm or 10 inches. This is the time the sun takes to complete one revolution.

- On the fourth row, 100 days is represented by 100cm or 1 metre. One metre contains 39.37 inches and in 100 days the sun has spun 3.937 revolutions.
- On the fifth row, 254 days is represented by 254cm or 100 inches. In 254 days the sun has completed 10 revolutions.
- On the sixth row, 365.24 days or one year is represented by 365.24cm or 144 inches (12 Feet). In 365.24 days the sun has completed 14.4 revolutions.
- Finally, on the seventh row, 100'000 days are represented by 100'000cm or 39370 inches. (1 kilometre). The sun has completed 3937 revolutions in 100'000 days.

It takes a while for all this arithmetic to sink in, but you can clearly see where our metric and imperial systems originated from. It is all based upon the rotational period of the sun and earth. It's absolutely amazing how these correlations tie in so perfectly with our everyday measuring system. These parallels can't be emphasised enough. Not many people are aware that the units we use today are manufactured and relate directly to the heavens. The reader might be a little bamboozled by all the arithmetic at this point. Therefore, it maybe wise to re-read the last couple of pages to grasp the significance of the connections between our measuring units and the heavens.

THE FURLONG

Remember, all these units have a dual meaning. One is a fully functional system openly used by the mass public, while the other is a covert language utilised exclusively by the ruling elite. The origin of the furlong is a classic example. Everyone has heard of the mile, kilometre, inch, and so on, but the furlong is not so well known. This specific length is widely used in horse racing, but again its true roots are firmly fixed in the heavens. The furlong is exactly 7920 inches or 201.1 metres long. Again, on the surface these lengths appear obscure and completely random as if they evolved naturally. However, the real truth lurks behind its manufactured façade. It is astonishing to know that planet earth has a diameter of 7920 miles and travels 201.1 times its own diameter per day as it journeys around the sun. Therefore, the furlong is no coincidence. It has been carefully calculated and craftily implemented into the public domain. Furthermore, if the diameter of the earth was divided into 201.1 separate segments, then each segment would equal 39.37 miles long. That 3937 number again! I'm not saying the horse racing fraternity intentionally invented the furlong. No more than the people who manufacture rulers invented the inch or centimetre. They are totally unaware they are using a hidden mathematical system. These industries are innocent but convenient instruments used to promote and implement a double meaning numbering system into the public domain. They are totally unaware the ruling elite are pulling the strings of control behind the scenes.

NEW YEAR

I have often wondered why our new year begins on the 1st of January. We all seem to take this date for granted. However, this particular date makes no logical sense on which to start the year. It would have been far more suitable to begin the year on one of the equinoxes or solstices. The solstices and equinoxes are when our four earthly seasons; summer, autumn, winter, and spring begin. So why was the 1st of January selected to start the year, and what made this date so special? Well, I believe this date relates back to ancient Egyptian astrology and their method of time keeping. The bright star Sirius was a key factor in the ancient mythology of Egypt. I have discovered that on the 1st of January the star Sirius and Earth are aligned perfectly with the sun. In this respect Sirius is a bright convenient star in the sky that marks the beginning of the year. However, Sirius wasn't just randomly chosen because it aligns with earth on the 1st of January. It was selected for a much more intricate measuring purpose. Earth's alignment with Sirius signifies the first day of the year and therefore dictates the sequence of days that follow. For example the 22nd of February is the 53rd day of the year. The 22nd of February will only be the 53rd day of the year assuming we start counting from the 1st of January. Now, as I have described above, the sun rotates once on its axis every 25.4 days. The 254th day of the year is important because it mirrors the 25.4 day rotational period of the sun. It is also the time when the sun has completed 10 revolutions on its axis. This multiple of 10 also mirrors the 10 planets. Moreover, the 254th day of the year is September the 11th and we all know what happened in New York on that horrific day. The timing of that tragic event wasn't randomly chosen but was orchestrated carefully by the elite. The elite are sun cult worshipers and understand its true full potential. Just as the tilt of the earth marks our seasons throughout the year; the sun's rotation marks the pinnacle of the elite year. Official history will never reveal or acknowledge these facts. Furthermore, these measurements tie up accurately with the dimensions of the great pyramid at Giza, which I will be describing in a later chapter. One important point to make here is that most countries throughout the world celebrate New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Yet, not many people realise that when they celebrate New Year they are in fact celebrating a Christian festival. Our year is supposedly calculated from the time period of Jesus Christ. So when we celebrated the New Year of 2012, we are in fact celebrating the 2012 years since the birth of Jesus Christ.

TEMPERATURE SCALE

Like everything described above, the temperature scale is no different, and the heavenly connections crop up like a common theme. We use three main temperature scales in our daily lives. The Kelvin scale, the Fahrenheit scale, and the Celsius scale. I believe all three scales relate to heavenly orbits. However, each scale starts at different temperatures, which relate to different times of the year. The Kelvin scale is mainly used in the scientific field and therefore has a wider range of temperatures that wouldn't normally be used by the general public. The coldest possible temperature in the universe is zero degrees Kelvin, also scientifically termed as 'absolute zero'. I believe this lowest temperature represents the first day of the year. From table 4 below you can clearly see that the 1st day of the year, which is the 1st of January, corresponds with zero degrees Kelvin. One quarter of the way through the year, which falls on the 1st of April or the 91st day corresponds with 91 degrees Kelvin. Half way through the year, which falls on the 1st of June or the 182nd day corresponds with 182 degrees Kelvin. The 254th day of the year, which falls on September 11th, which is 10 complete rotations of the sun, corresponds with 254 degrees Kelvin. Three quarters through the year, which falls on the 30th of September or the 273rd day corresponds with 273 degrees Kelvin. Finally, at the end of the year, which falls on the 31st of December or the 365th day corresponds with 365 degrees Kelvin. The Kelvin scale identically mirrors both the centimetre scale and the days of the year. As I mentioned earlier one centimetre represents one day. Therefore, 365 cm or 12 feet equals the 365 days or 12 months in the year. Additionally, one centimetre also represents one degree Kelvin. Therefore 365 cm represents 365 degrees Kelvin or 365 days of the year.

I believe the Celsius scale represents the orbit of the moon. The moon orbits around planet earth once every 27.3 days. This 27.3 day orbit is relative to any distant star and is termed its 'sidereal period'. Therefore, the moon will complete 10 full sidereal orbits of planet earth in 273 days. This is why the Celsius scale starts at minus 273 degrees. The zero degree point on the Celsius scale represents the 273rd day of the year, marking 10 complete orbits of the moon around planet earth. These 10 full orbits of the moon symbolically mirror the 10 planets orbiting the sun.

TABLE 4.

	START	$\frac{1}{4}$	$\frac{1}{2}$	254TH	$\frac{3}{4}$	END
DATE	1st Jan	1st April	1st June	11th Sept	30th Sept	31st Dec
DAY	1st Day	91st Day	182nd Day	254th Day	273rd Day	365th Day
CM	1st Cm	91st Cm	182nd Cm	254th Cm	273rd Cm	365th Cm
KELVIN	0 Deg	91st Deg	182nd Deg	255th Deg	273rd Deg	365th Deg
CELSIUS	-273 Deg	-182 Deg	-91 Deg	-17.7 Deg	0 Deg	91 Deg
FAHREN	-459 Deg	-296 Deg	-132 Deg	0 Deg	32 Deg	196 Deg

For example, minus 273 degrees is the start of the Celsius scale and represents the first day of the year. It also symbolises the 273 days still to go before the moon completes 10 orbits around planet earth. Minus 182 degrees Celsius is one quarter the way through the year and symbolises the 182 days still to go before the moon completes 10 orbits around planet earth. Minus 91 degrees Celsius is half way through the year and symbolises the 91 days still to go before the moon completes 10 orbits around planet earth. Minus 17.7 degrees Celsius is the 254th day of a leap year, and refers to the 17.7 days still to go before the moon completes 10 orbits around earth. Remember, minus 17.7 degrees Celsius equals 0 degrees Fahrenheit and this signifies the 254th day of the year. Zero degrees Celsius, is three quarters the way through the year and falls on the 273rd day. This signifies the 10 orbits the moon has completed around earth, which takes 273 days. Finally plus 91 degrees Celsius falls on the 365 day of the year and represents the 91 days that have elapsed since the moon completed 10 orbits.

So the Kelvin scale represents the 365 days it takes earth to journey around the sun. While the Celsius scale represents the 273 day journey it takes the moon to complete 10 orbits around the earth. That only leaves the Fahrenheit scale. I believe this scale also refers to the moon's orbit. From table 4 above, you can see that the Fahrenheit scale ranges from between, minus 459 degrees, to plus 196.25 degrees. So from 0 to 365 degrees Kelvin there is a total of 655 degrees in the Fahrenheit range. That is 1.8 degrees Fahrenheit to every 1 degree Kelvin. These 655 degrees equal the 655 hours contained within 27.32 days. Remember 27.32 days is the time it takes the moon to complete one sidereal orbit around planet earth. Furthermore, the zero degree point on the Fahrenheit scale represents the 254th day of the year. This can be no coincidence! The three temperature scales are a bit complicated to grasp because all their zero degree markers begin at different positions on the scale. However, there is a blatant correlation between all 3 temperature scales, our measuring units, and the heavens.

THE CLOCK

Our daily life is on the whole scheduled and governed by the clock. However, very few of us consider why it is divided into the hours, minutes, and seconds we are all familiar with. The traditional clock has 12 numerical markers around its face which I believe represents the 12 zodiac signs surrounding the sun. Therefore, one hour represents one zodiac sign, two hours represents two zodiac signs, three hours represents three zodiac signs, and so on. The 12 zodiac signs that circle the sun also mirror the 12 months of the year and the 12 inches contained within one foot. Table 5 below illustrates the connections between our everyday clock on the wall and the heavens.

TABLE 5.

ZODIAC/SUN	CLOCK	YEAR	FOOT
Capricorn	1st Hour	January	1 Inch
Aquarius	2nd Hour	February	2 Inches
Pisces	3rd Hour	March	3 Inches
Aries	4th Hour	April	4 Inches
Taurus	5th Hour	May	5 Inches
Gemini	6th Hour	June	6 Inches
Cancer	7th Hour	July	7 Inches
Leo	8th Hour	August	8 Inches
Virgo	9th Hour	September	9 Inches
Libra	10th Hour	October	10 Inches
Scorpio	11th Hour	November	11 Inches
Sagittarius	12th Hour	December	12 Inches

The collection of twelve in our culture is a prominent feature that is often taken for granted and can be easily overlooked. The number 12 is contained within many of our everyday beliefs and ceremonies. Table 6 below lists some well known examples. We have the 12 Tribes of Israel, Jesus and his 12 apostles, King Arthur and his 12 Knights of the round table, a Judge and 12 jury members, and last but not least, the 12 days of Christmas. These are just some prime examples of gatherings of 12. I believe all these collections of 12 mirrors the 12 zodiac signs that circle the sky.

This is a classic example of how we the public are unwittingly using a hidden numbering system in our everyday life without realising its true meaning. These numbers are incorporated into some of our fundamental belief systems, and one wonders why anyone would want to deceive people in such a way. Then again the elite exploit and manipulate all possible avenues in order to gain control over humanity. Inventing and orchestrating a major belief system to dupe the masses is one monumental trap that has mentally enslaved millions. Most religious believers are generally moulded from cradle to grave; instinctively and enthusiastically they accept the judgment from an invisible agent. If humanity is going to adopt this fanatical way of thinking then we are no more than convenient pawns in the hands of the religious game controllers.

TABLE 6.

ISRAEL	JESUS	KING ARTHUR	CHRISTMAS
Reuben	Peter	Gawain	Partridge pear/tree
Judah	Andrew	Perceval	Turtle doves
Ephraim	James son Zebedee	Galabad	French hens
Dan	John	Lancelot	Calling birds
Simeon	Philip	Lucan	Gold rings
Issachar	Bartholomew	Bedivere	Geese laying
Manasseh	Thomas	Tristram	Swans swimming
Asber	Matthew	Lionell	Maids milking
Gad	James of Alphaeus	Gareth	Ladies dancing
Zebulun	Simon	Kay	Lords leaping
Benjamin	Judas	Palomedes	Pipers piping
Naphtali	Thaddeus	Lamorak	Drummers Drum

The examples above might explain why we have 12 numerical markers on the clock face, but what about the hours and seconds? We all know one hour contains 60 minutes and one minute contains 60 seconds, but why? Again, I believe the reason for this relates to the heavens. The width of the sun as viewed from earth has an angle of 0.5 degrees. Therefore, if we could theoretically place 60 suns' side by side, then its total width would amount to 30 degrees. Each zodiac sign is 30 degrees wide. Remember, there are 12 zodiac signs surrounding the sun. Therefore 60 suns' side by side would equal the width of one zodiac sign or one hour. The 60 minutes in one hour mirrors the 60 suns' needed to bridge the angle of one zodiac sign. An astonishing amount of heavenly dimensions are deliberately incorporated into our everyday measuring systems. That can only point towards a hidden force inventing and orchestrating this numerical system from behind the scenes. The sun, earth, and moon seem to be the prominent factors in all these measurements. However, the sun seems to take a more important role and that's because it's the omnipotent force that created and sustains all life. Furthermore, the ruling elite understand the power of the sun and religiously worship it for their devious agenda of control.

What about the minutes; how do these fit into the heavenly measurements? Well there is a total of 1440 minutes in one day. I believe the 1440 minutes mirror the number of rotations the sun completes in one year which is 14.40. It further reflects the 144 inches contained within 365 cm that I explained earlier. The number 144 also crops up in biblical scripture in the book of Revelation. For example:

Revelation Chapter 14: verse 1: “Then I looked, and there before me was the Lamb, standing on Mount Zion, and with him 144’000 who had his name and his Father’s name written on their foreheads.”

Revelation Chapter 14: verse 3: “And they sang a new song before the throne and before the four living creatures and the elders. No one could learn the song except the 144’000 who had been redeemed from the earth.”

In the scriptures above you can clearly see the 144’000 connection. Notice too in the second scripture it says the: ‘four living creatures.’ I believe this is a reference to earth’s four seasons. It is the constant changing of the 4 seasons that gives all life upon earth its natural cycles. So it’s no coincidence the bible refers to it as ‘four living creatures.’ Furthermore, 144’000 could relate not just to the 1440 minutes contained within one day, but the 14.4 revolutions the sun makes every year.

THE SECOND

All of the numbers described in this chapter are extremely accurate. However, some numbers have been insignificantly rounded up or down to the nearest decimal point for convenience. This rounding up or down is negligible, except when it comes to describing the origin of the second. There are 86’400 seconds contained within one day. It was my belief that this number somehow refers to the sun. In a way it does, but my calculations are slightly skewed out. If the diameter of the sun were 864’000 miles wide then this would certainly indicate where our 86’400 seconds in one day came from. Furthermore, 864’000 is ten times greater than 86’400, signifying the 10 planets that revolve around the sun.

In fact the sun is officially 864’950 miles in diameter, which throws my calculation out by 950 miles. However, the sun is an extremely large object and although 950 miles might sound a huge amount, it is in fact very small in cosmic terms. Furthermore, the sun is not a solid body like the earth and has no defined solid outer edge. How can you accurately measure the diameter of a large nuclear ball of fire? The best you can give is an overall average. Even though the sun is officially 864'950 miles in diameter, I still believe it refers to our 86'400 seconds contained in one day. In the next chapter I will be describing the origin of the second in a bit more detail.

CHAPTER 6

Numerology

I would like to continue where I left off at the end of the previous chapter regarding the origins of the second. The hours, minutes, and seconds I described earlier are deliberately connected with the natural measurements of the sun. My calculation of 86'400 seconds in one day was slightly skewed out when relating it to the sun's diameter. However, there is further evidence to suggest the second originated from the heavens. The second is the smallest practical denomination of time and therefore dictates the length of the minute and hour, because both are multiples of the second. The puzzle is who or what decided upon the exact length of the second? It's easy to say that one minute contains 60 seconds, and one hour contains 60 minutes. But how long is a second? How can the length of the second be quantified? The answer to this mystery lies in knowledge of the speed of light and the circumference of the moon. Remember, the moon completes one sidereal orbit of planet earth every 27.32 days, and 10 complete orbits every 273 days. The relationship between the speed of light, the moon, and the earth is illustrated in table 7 below. On the first row on table 7, you can clearly see that it takes light 1 second to traverse the moon's circumference 27.3 times. The same number of days it takes the moon to orbit earth. I believe this is where the second originated from. The second symbolically reflects the time it takes the moon to complete one orbit around planet earth. Furthermore, for light to traverse the moon's circumference 273 times would take exactly 10 seconds. Again, this mirrors the temperature scale calculations described in the previous chapter. Remember, it takes 273 days for the moon to orbit the earth 10 times. The number 10 seems to be the central aspect in all these calculations. The reason why ten is so important is because it emphasizes the 10 planets that orbit around the sun. From table 7 below, you can see that it takes 3.65 seconds for light to traverse 100 times around the circumference of the moon. It's interesting to know that planet earth is 3.6 times larger than the moon. Furthermore, in 3.65 seconds light will have travelled 27.3 times around planet earth. The same number of days it takes the moon to orbit once around the earth.

We all know there are 365.24 days in one year. Yet, for light to travel 365.24 times around the moons circumference would take 13.37 seconds. The reader might be asking themselves what significance the number 13.37 has. Well the moon completes 13.37 orbits around planet earth in one year, hence 365.24 orbits in 13.37 seconds. It is also interesting to find that in 13.37 seconds light has travelled exactly 100 times around planet earth. The whole relationship with light doesn't end there. It takes light 36.5 seconds to traverse the circumference of planet earth 273 times. 36.5 days is exactly one tenth of a year, indicating the 10 planets again. These numbers are no coincidence and it shows the technological knowledge the ruling elite possessed when these units were invented. It also shows the reader exactly where our imperial and metric measuring systems originated from.

TABLE 7.

	LIGHT 27.32X	LIGHT 100X	LIGHT 273.2X	LIGHT 365.24X
MOON	1 Sec	3.65 Sec	10 Sec	13.37 Sec
EARTH	3.65 Sec	13.37 Sec	36.5 Sec	48.8 Sec

The whole theme of light doesn't end, because many of the measurements and units we use on a daily basis have a connection with light. Diagram 1 below further illustrates connections with the second and the moon. For example, as the moon orbits around the earth it goes through its familiar eight phases. From diagram 1 you can see that the eight phases of the moon relate to the eight seconds it takes for light to traverse the moons orbital circumference around the earth. Furthermore, for light to travel across the moons orbital diameter from end to end would take 2.54 seconds.

DIAGRAM 1.

This mirrors the 2.54 cm in 1 inch. Amazingly, it also reflects the distance the moon moves in one day, which is 25.4 times its own width. The reader will be well aware by now that the sun completes one revolution on its axis every 25.4 days. Both these measurements parallel each other.

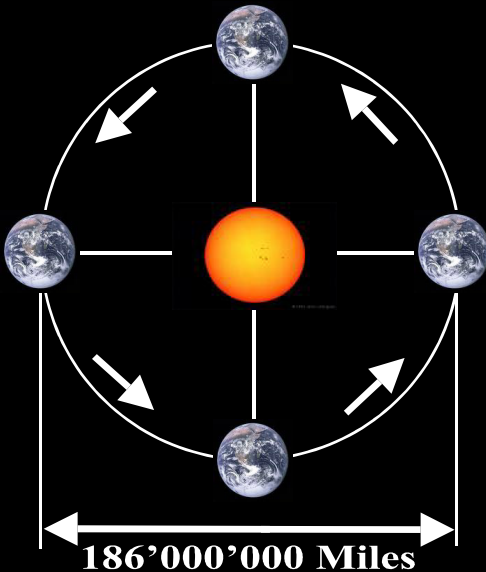

Light is a common theme in my measurements and diagram 2 below illustrates a further example. As earth journeys around the sun, it passes the four points of each season, marking out a cross. I believe this is where the religious cross of Christianity originated from. However, for light to travel across the diameter of the earth's orbit, which is 186'000'000 miles wide, would take 1000 seconds. This 186'000'000 miles diameter mirrors the speed of light which 186'000 miles per second. The 1000 seconds is obviously a denomination of 10 and I believe it somehow reflects the 10 planets. It could also relate to the biblical scripture in 2nd Peter.

2nd Peter Chapter 3: Verse 8: “But do not forget this one thing, dear friends: With the Lord a day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like a day.”

The week is another concept we all take for granted in our everyday life. For example, why do we have seven days in one week, and 52 weeks in a year? Again, these are simple everyday numbers we tend to overlook. Diagram 2 below illustrates where the week possibly originated from. The physical distance the earth completes on its journey around the sun in one year amounts to approximately 584 million miles. For light to traverse that distance would take roughly 52.1 minutes. I believe this is where our 52.1 weeks in one year comes from. Furthermore, visible light is composed of the seven colours of the spectrum; red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. It is these seven colours that represent the seven days of the week. It's interesting to note that it also takes light exactly 60 seconds to travel the distance earth moves in one week. This could be further confirmation why we have 60 seconds in one minute and 60 minutes in one hour. Remember, all these measurements relate to the sun, earth, and moon. The sun is the real source of light that illuminates the world. This is why we have 7 days in one week and 52 weeks in one year. Both relate to light.

DIAGRAM 2.

It takes light just over 52 minutes to travel around the earth's orbital circumference. This mirrors the number of weeks contained within one year which is just over 52.

It takes light 1000 seconds to travel the earth's orbital diameter, which is 186'000'000 miles wide. This mirrors the speed of light which is 186'000 miles per second.

The cross is an iconic Christian symbol and there are numerous variations of it throughout history depicting the crucifixion. The Celtic cross is as famous as they get. However, the cross, and in particular the Celtic cross emulates the heavens. From diagram 3 below, you can see planet earth journeying around the sun with the four yearly seasons reflecting the four points of the cross.

DIAGRAM 3.

Celtic Cross

Earth & Moon's Journey

Now the moon orbits earth in an anticlockwise direction once every 27.32 days. At the same time earth is also orbiting around the sun in an anticlockwise direction. Both are moving anticlockwise simultaneously. If I were to trace the moon's motion as it orbits around the earth throughout the year, then the general pattern that would emerge would be a series of overlapping concentric circles. The similarities can be instantly noticeable when you compare it with the Celtic cross. This is no coincidence because the Celtic cross is actually a representation of the earth and moon's yearly journey.

The same numerical measurements crop up in the most unexpected places, and it clearly shows how much control and influence the ruling elite have in our lives. For example, when you record on a typical DVD and have to set the record quality to either, SLP= Super Long Play, EP= Extended Play, LP= Long Play, SP= Short Play, or HQ= High Quality. These different settings relate to recording lengths and qualities on a DVD recorder. From table 8 below you can see that these recording lengths relate to well known measurements. If I were to divide the 365.24 day year into six equal parts, then each part would be 60.8 days long. The different DVD recording times mirror the six equally spaced dates throughout the year. Not only do these six equally spaced units relate to measurements, but also mirror well known western celebrations or holidays also listed below. The chance of this happening by coincidence is virtually zero. I believe that dividing the year into six equal parts symbolises the six points on the Star of David, the national flag of Israel.

I have often wondered why the six pointed star is so important and what special significance it has. It seems to be a prominent symbol in many ancient mystical beliefs. After studying its properties for a while it suddenly struck me why this six sided shape was so unique. The circle is a perfectly balanced geometrical shape that has no edges or angles. In many ways the circle represents a perfectly balanced geometrical unit. The Star of David encapsulates this perfect geometrical balance. The reason for this is very simple. The example in diagram 4 below shows an arrangement of seven coins. The central coin is perfectly surrounded by six outer coins. This configuration of circles or coins is very important because they form an accurate but natural geometric fit. The central circle or coin touches all the surrounding six circles. Furthermore, the six outer circles all touch its neighbouring circle leaving no uneven gaps anywhere.

TABLE 8.

DVD	DAY	CM	FEET	MONTH	DATE
HQ 60 Min	60 th Day	60 Cm	2 Feet	2 nd Month	1 st Mar
SP 121 Min	121 st Day	121 Cm	4 Feet	4 th Month	1 st May
LP 182 Min	182 nd Day	182 Cm	6 Feet	6 th Month	1 st July
EP 243 Min	243 rd Day	243 Cm	8 Feet	8 th Month	31 st Aug
N/A	304 th Day	304 Cm	10 Feet	10 th Month	31 st Oct
SLP 365 Min	365 th Day	365 Cm	12 Feet	12 th Month	31 st Dec

1st March: The Salem Witch hunts begin; Roman Empire New Year; USA test nuclear weapons at Bikini Atoll.

1st May: May Day Holiday; Act of Union between England and Scotland creating the United Kingdom of Great Britain; Bavarian Illuminati formed; Planet Pluto is officially named.

1st July: Canada Day; Hong Kong's sovereignty is handed over to the republic of China; International Criminal Court was established; United States Justice Department began operating.

31st August: Eve of WW2; Princess Diana dies,

31st October: Halloween; Battle of Britain ends.

31st December: New Year's Eve.

The fact that seven perfect circles can naturally fit together suggests this geometric arrangement is a perfectly balanced shape. No other configuration of circles achieves this geometric balance. Now it doesn't matter what diameter of circle is used, because you will always achieve a perfect fit. If the reader is in any doubt, then they are more than welcome to do the arithmetic. To make it easier try arranging seven coins in this sequence and you will find they all fit precisely together leaving no margin of error.

DIAGRAM 4.

DIAGRAM 5.

To take this arrangement further, in diagram 5, I have joined the centre of each circle together with lines to show the overall shape of the Star of David. The reader might have noticed that there are twelve triangles contained within this structure. I believe this reinforces the symbolic connection between the twelve months of the year, the 12 tribes of Israel, and the 12 inches in one foot, etc. These seven circles display the perfect balance between nature and geometry.

Bear in mind, this fit is natural and not man made. These seven circles snugly merging together accurately reflect nature's perfect geometry. This is why the Star of David is used to symbolise the land of Israel or the holy land. (Holidays=Holy-days). It isn't just on the flag of Israel that we find this double triangle. This shape crops up in other mystical symbols. The Seal of Solomon, and the square and compass of Freemasonry are two prime examples. See diagram 6 below. You can clearly see the similarities between these three symbols, and it doesn't take much imagination to deduce they are depicting the same configuration. The arrangement of coins in diagram 5 above, with its six sides not only symbolises the perfect balance between nature and geometry. It also illustrates the year divided into six equal parts, with each point representing a holiday/holy-day shown above in table 8.

DIAGRAM 6.

Flag of Israel - Square and Compass - Seal of Solomon

So the Star of David, the Seal of Solomon, and the Freemasonic square and compass all symbolise the same concept. That concept is the perfect harmony between the heavens, nature, and geometry. Furthermore, these six points or circles also symbolise six well known dates throughout the year as earth journeys around the sun. The central circle symbolises the central sun, and the first of the six points relate to the start of the year. We also know that on this date the star Sirius is conjunct with earth and the sun. Sirius can also be seen symbolised on the apex of the square and compass emblem, and on the Crown Point of the Seal of Solomon. The ‘Seal of Solomon’ is an apt name because this symbol with its six sided arrangement is essentially a perfect natural geometric ‘seal.’ In the middle sits one ‘solo’ central circle representing the sun or sol, and Mon-day is the first day of the week. So both the 'Solo' Sun or 'Sol' and 'Mon' for Monday are contained within the name Solomon.

The various weights we are familiar with are no exception to this heavenly connection. Table 9 below shows how these weights relate to the heavenly motions. It is my belief that 1 kilogram represents 1 earth day, 2 kilograms equals 2 days, 3 kilograms equals 3 days and so on. Just as one centimetre represented 1 earth day described in the previous chapter, one kilogram holds the same position when we are dealing with weights. If this assumption is true then the various other units of weight should correspond with this simple calculation. Let me start by explaining the pound and how this weight relates to the kilogram. There are 2.20 pounds contained within 1 kilogram, 4.40 pounds in 2 kilograms, 6.61 pounds in 3 kilograms, and so on.

How can the pound be accounted for? Remember, most of these weights date back into antiquity and we automatically believe they developed naturally. Although this belief is most certainly wrong. The real answer lies in the knowledge of the moon's motion. The physical distance the moon travels on its journey around the earth in one day is approximately 54'879 miles. This is equal to 2.20 times the earth's circumference. Therefore, the distance the moon travels in two days is 4.40 times the earth's circumference. The distance the moon travels in three days is 6.61 times earth's circumference, and so on. So you can clearly see that the 2.20 pounds contained within one kilogram actually refers the motion of the moon.

The ounce is very similar to the pound, in the sense that it refers to the moon's circumference rather than that of the earth. There are 35.2 ounces contained within one kilogram. This number refers to the distance between the earth and moon, which is on average 238'906 miles, or 35.2 times the moon's circumference. So 1 kilogram equals the distance to the moon, which is 35.2 ounces, or 35.2 times the moon's circumference. 2 kilograms equals twice the distance to the moon, which is 70.5 ounces or 70.5 times the moon's circumference. 3 kilograms equals three times the distance to the moon, which is 105.8 ounces or 105.8 times the moon's circumference, and so on.

The chance of these numbers coinciding by accident is astronomical. The ancient astronomers possessed more technological knowledge than we imagine. Now what about the stone, how can this weight relate to the kilogram? Remember, I believe one kilogram equals one day so the stone should also tie in with this calculation. I described in the previous chapter that the sun rotates on its axis once every 25.4 days. As the sun completes this 25.4 day rotation it sweeps past the four seasons or quadrants that mark out the year. I believe that each quarter rotation of the sun represents one stone. Therefore, one stone equals one quarter rotation of the sun, which is 6.35 days or 6.35 kilograms. Two stone equals one half a rotation of the sun, which is 12.70 days or 12.70 kilograms. Three stone equals a three quarter rotation of the sun, which is 19.05 days or 19.05 kilograms. And lastly four stone equals one complete rotation of the sun, which is 25.4 days or 25.4 kilograms. And from the table below the reader will discover that these calculations correlate perfectly. So 1 kilogram equals 0.15 stone, which simply means that the sun has rotated 0.15th of a quarter rotation in one day. 2 kilograms equal 0.31 stone, which means that the sun has rotated 0.31th of a quarter rotation in two days. 3 kilograms equal 0.47 stone, which means that the sun has rotated 0.47th of a quarter rotation in three days. And so on...

It is amazing how all these units correlate together and clearly relate to the motions of the moon, earth, and sun. Table 9 below shows the relationship between these weights.

So far I have described many different measurements and how they relate to the heavens. However, I would like to clarify a few points regarding the origins of the mile and the kilometre. These two distances demonstrate that the ruling elite possessed superior knowledge back in ancient times.

TABLE 9.

KG	DAYS	LB	MOON	OZ	MOON	STONE	$\frac{1}{4}$ SUN
1	1	2.20	2.20	35.27	35.27	0.15	0.15
2	2	4.40	4.40	70.54	70.54	0.31	0.31
3	3	6.61	6.61	105.81	105.81	0.47	0.47
4	4	8.81	8.81	141.09	141.09	0.62	0.62
5	5	11.02	11.02	176.36	176.36	0.78	0.78
6	6	13.22	13.22	211.63	211.63	0.94	0.94
6.35	6.35	13.99	13.99	223.99	223.99	1	1
7	7	15.4	15.4	246.91	246.91	1.10	1.10
8	8	17.63	17.63	282.18	282.18	1.25	1.25
9	9	19.84	19.84	317.45	317.45	1.41	1.41
10	10	22.04	22.04	352.73	352.73	1.57	1.57
12.70	12.70	27.99	27.99	447.98	447.98	2	2
19.05	19.05	41.99	41.99	671.98	671.98	3	3
25.4	25.4	55.99	55.99	895.93	895.93	4	4
27.32	27.32	60.22	60.22	963.65	963.65	4.30	4.30

It took me a while to discover the true meaning behind these numbers, but after weeks of number crunching the answer finally appeared. The mile is precisely 1.609344 kilometres long. Where exactly did this number originate from? Most of us never really consider the roots of these obscure numbers and just accept them as they are. Like all the units I have described, they have been cleverly conceived to conceal an accurate knowledge of the heavens. We know that light travels at 186'282 miles per second, but what distance will light travel in 24 hours? If the reader wants to do a little calculation then they will discover that it turns out to be an extremely large number; 16'094'764'800 miles to be precise. The similarities between these two results are too close for comfort. However, one number is 1000 times larger than the other, and this might reflect the biblical scripture outlined below.

2nd Peter Chapter 3: Verse 8: “But do not forget this one thing, dear friends: With the Lord a day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like a day.”

Therefore, one mile also represents one day. The distance light travels in one day is similar to the number of kilometres contained within one mile. These numbers can be a little confusing to grasp, so I recommend the reader to work through the arithmetic with a calculator just for clarity.

There is further evidence to substantiate that the mile and kilometre relate to the heavens. For example, one mile contains 63'360 inches. We also know that planet earth completes one rotation on its axis every day. The earth has a circumference of 24'906 miles, and this too must complete one spin every day. So in 2.54 days the earth will complete 2.54 rotations on its axis. This means its circumference has spun 2.54 times. 2.54 times the earth's circumference equals 63'360 miles, which is how many inches, are contained within 1 mile.

(2.544 multiplied by 24'906 equal 63'360).

(I had to extend the 2.54 number to a more accurate figure in order for the calculation to be achieved.)

The reader will be well aware by now that the number 2.54 relates to the spin of the sun, which I described in detail in chapter 5.

Due to the earth's spin, the equator tends to bulge out a little. In effect this gives it a larger circumference. The earth's circumference was once calculated at 24'944 miles. If I were to divide this circumference by the number of inches in one mile, (63'360) the result would be 0.3937. This is the exact number of inches in one centimetre. Remember, 1cm represents 1 day. 0.3937 is also the number of rotations the sun completes in 10 days.

I would like to finish this chapter by leaving the reader with a few very important thoughts. The ancient Mayans believed that the year 2012 was going to be the end of a great cycle. Some have predicted this great cycle might actually be the end of the world. Alternatively, it could be the end of the global financial system that controls us all. It is interesting to note that the city of London has been nominated as the venue to host the 2012 Olympic Games. Furthermore, the Olympic Games will be held in an area of London where the Millennium Dome has been constructed. Remarkably, the Millennium Dome has a diameter of 365 feet, which mirrors the number of days in 1 year. The Dome was also one of the main locations for the Millennium celebrations in the year 2000. The year 2000 effectively marked the so called 2000th birthday of Jesus Christ. Our apparent saviour from sin, or might it be the advancement of human evolution? The Millennium Dome was officially given the go ahead to be built by the British parliament. The so called, "Mother of parliamentary democracy." The Dome also has 12 supporting pylons protruding from its roof, symbolically representing the 12 months of the year. It is no surprise to me that London was selected to host the 2012 Olympic Games, which coincides with the Mayan 2012 prophecies. After all, London is the seat of the Great British Empire; the very place that spread the financial trading system across the globe. The very system that now controls the world. The Millennium Dome sits in the same location as the Greenwich Observatory, which is famous for global time keeping, or Greenwich Mean Time. It's no coincidence that the Christian Pilgrimage place Lourdes, located in southern France is also located on the Greenwich Meridian. Coincidentally, the British emergency telephone number is 999, which is the reverse of 666. Remember, 666 is the biblical number of the beast. Furthermore, the emergency telephone number in the USA is 911, which happens to be the date of September 11th, the 254th day of the year. All these facts point to some kind of prophetic timing mechanism in place. Perhaps the Mayans were right; maybe they understood the true game plan of the Global Ruling Elite. Who knows what will happen; only time will tell.

CHAPTER 7

Mythological Tales

So where do all these numbers lead us? Do numbers actually prove anything? Well one thing is for sure; all our numerical units must have been carefully manufactured and did not come about randomly as we are led to believe. A detailed knowledge of the heavens, planetary dimensions, and the speed of light must have been crucial to engineer such units. Furthermore, these numerical units date back into antiquity. According to official history, knowledge of planetary and solar rotations and their dimensions are recent discoveries and were certainly not known back in ancient times. This leaves us with a bit of a conundrum. Either the numbers I have put forward in the previous chapters are nonsense, or the officially accepted version of history is wrong. It is my opinion our official history is a fabricated version of events. I don't mean history is wrong as such. No more than the temperature scales, weigh scales, ruler, and clock are wrong. I believe our official history has a double meaning, in the same way the numerical units do. One version is fed to the mass public while the real version remains subtly hidden from view. The temperature scales, weigh scales, ruler, and clock, are still useful objects even if the reader is unaware of the subtle double meanings lurking behind them. These units and scales still make sense and have usable functions in our everyday life. Not possessing that hidden knowledge doesn't necessarily make these units and scales defunct. Likewise, the accepted version of history will still make sense even though we are unaware of a sinister underlying version.

If the official version of history has a concealed truth, what might it be? I mentioned in a previous chapter that the sun's power is the driving force behind the process of evolution. The power of the sun is at the heart of the whole matter. This is why the sun was worshiped in ancient times. This sun cult worship still exists today in various disguises. For example, the British Prime Minister's residence at 10 Downing Street has a depiction of the sun etched into the glass panel above its famous black door. Furthermore, the etching even shows the flaming rays of the sun being emitted. This glass panel is semi circular in shape and has approximately 7.2 panes of glass. The lower half of the semi circle is absent and forms part of the door. This half is symbolically hidden in darkness, depicting the elite holding back the true power of the sun's evolutionary mechanism. If both semi circles were visible then 14.4 panes of glass would be seen. Remember, 14.4 is the number of revolutions the sun completes in one year.

The Great British Empire was symbolised by the lion. The lion's mane is said to represent the rays of the sun, and this is why we see the lion shaped door knocker at 10 Downing Street. The number ten symbolises the 10 planets that revolve around the sun as described in the previous chapters. The actual black door depicts both the dark sun during an eclipse and the ruling elite tainting humanity by stifling nature's evolutionary mechanism. The ancient sun worship cults that we believe are resigned to history survive in power today. 10 Downing Street is a prime example of prime ministerial power. Furthermore, when the British Empire was at the height of its power, the famous proverb referring to its far reaching supremacy was: "The Empire on which the Sun never sets."

Evolution is a mysterious process and the sun's radiation is the mechanism by which it works. I believe the sun's powerful electromagnetic radiation energy has been totally misunderstood within the astrological fraternity. They have mysteriously identified this energy as an all pervasive influence that moulds life at birth. In the Christian texts, I believe the sun's life sustaining properties was referred to as the Holy Spirit. Both the mysterious astrological force and the Holy Spirit were supposed to permeate and inhabit all matter. Maybe these two forces are the same mechanism. I believe this natural mechanism has been intentionally manufactured into endless mystical interpretations in order to throw humanity off the scent. The Son of God dying on the cross in order to take away our sins has another meaning. It could be the literal sun on a cross. The cross being the four seasons that earth passes on its journey around the sun each year. The Sun/Son dying on the cross is the time when it reaches its lowest point on the winter solstice. (Three days before Christmas.) The sun is symbolically dead at this point and emits the least amount of light. It is the sun in the sky on the cross that has the power to sustain life and evolve us all forward. Evolution is the process by which we as a species slowly change from our present state into a more advanced form. Evolution is effectively a type of rebirth that transforms us from our old state of being into a new one. This is the religious meaning of being reborn through baptism, or the son/sun dying for our sins. Washing away old sins is parallel to sweeping away your former self and becoming a new being. It's all a narrative pointing towards natural evolution, which is ultimately driven by the sun's power. The biblical sinner is referring to the stagnant state humankind is being kept in by the ruling elite. They are preventing humankind from evolving properly by tampering about with the machinery of nature. Evolution is an extremely slow process; therefore, we fail to notice its impact on a conscious level. Nevertheless, it creeps forward and continues to advance before our very eyes. I believe the whole Christian story is symbolic of this.

The Son of God surrounded by his twelve disciples is mirrored by a Judge and his twelve jury members, King Arthur and his twelve knights of the round table, Moses and the twelve tribes of Israel, a foot with its twelve inches, the year with its twelve months, and a clock face with its twelve digits. All these representations are referring to the same concept. That concept is the real heavenly sun in the sky surrounded by its twelve constellations or zodiac signs. The zodiac with its 12 figurative animals surrounding the heavens doesn't mirror the star patterns as we are led to believe. Animal representations were selected to symbolically indicate stages of natural evolution in all its many forms. Almost any picture or figure can be represented by the star constellations. It's absolutely no coincidence that these animals were selected to depict and mirror the zodiac.

The so called appointed time the messiah would return to the earth was foreseen by the biblical astrologers. I don't think the astrologers were referring to a literal person arriving on earth. They were referring to a fixed programme in our biological clock that would be activated sometime in the future. Our biological clock is governed by our DNA, and our DNA is further governed by the frequency of the sun's electromagnetic radiation. So ultimately it is the sun that controls our biological programming. The ancient astrologers knew when the human biological clock would take its next leap in evolution. Biology is already pre-programmed to take evolutionary leaps at certain periods in time. However, the ancient astrologers needed an accurate mechanism to measure the passage of time. That mechanism was the motion of the stars and planets. They worked out what position the planets and stars would be in when this biological leap was imminent. They utilised the map of the sky as a convenient clock for reference. This was the fundamental basis for modern astrology. However, modern astrology has misinterpreted the workings and methods of the real ancient techniques. Modern astrology believes the planets and stars mould some biological blueprint on us at birth. Furthermore, this blueprint is further influenced by the position of the planets throughout our life. But the ancient astrologers merely used the stars and planets as a convenient and accurate timepiece to predict when this evolutionary jump was going to occur. In a similar way we use a clock and calendar to calculate when spring will come about. The ancient astrologers used the heavenly clock to measure when humans will blossom in evolutionary terms. It is the power of the sun that drives the whole process forward not the stars and planets. The distant stars and planets were just useful timing tools to measure our advancement.

So the second coming of the messiah is simply this crucial evolutionary jump humankind has still to make. This jump in evolution will waken us up from the mental, emotional, and spiritual stagnation we are all held captive in. I believe those who possess and truly understand that knowledge is what history has referred to as the Holy Grail. This knowledge or Holy Grail has been hijacked by the sinister ruling elite, who utilise it for their selfish agenda of global control. Attaining this evolutionary jump is constantly being stifled by them. The Christian idea of being reborn is this actual evolutionary leap occurring. Buddhists would refer to it all as enlightenment. Nevertheless, it's all the same bag of tricks. In fact most Christian terminology corresponds to the motion and measurements of the heavens in an elaborate way. The ruling elite are the custodians of the Holy Grail. They understand the sun's powerful potential and are strangling the population's growth. They are denying us access to nature's wonderful well of life. Evolution isn't just some kind of advancement that turns us all into another creature or animal. Evolution is a mental, physical, emotional, and spiritual journey.

For example, if I want to feel healthier, then giving up smoking would be an obvious start. However, it would be impossible to receive the emotional and mental benefits that would come about as a result if I failed to physically stop smoking in the first place. A certain degree of mental and emotional strength is required to make that initial decision to physically stop. Obviously, if these mental and emotional qualities were absent, then the strength to stop smoking would not be forthcoming. It seems like a long-winded way to stop smoking, but this rule applies to most things in life. Nothing progresses forward or happens, unless you initially make some physically effort. Only then will the mental, emotional, and spiritual benefits follow. A certain degree of mental, emotional, and spiritual effort is initially required to make and carry out that decision. It is similar to the attitude people had to smoking back in the 1950s. Smoking was seen as cool and trendy, and in some parts of the world healthy. Trying to tell anyone back then to stop smoking was almost impossible, because they lived in a climate and culture where it was acceptable. Smoking was the normal done thing. If you didn't smoke you were viewed as unfashionable. However, it became extremely difficult for those smokers to stop once they finally realised it was killing them. The addiction had already gripped and taken over their willpower. By that stage it was probably too late.

Likewise, humankind will only evolve if the physical conditions are carried out. Only then will the mental, emotional, and spiritual aspects of evolution follow. A certain amount of emotional, mental, and spiritual strength is required initially by the individual to make that decision. This is why on every level of modern society we are being fed trivial nonsense to wear down our emotional, mental, and spiritual aspects. For humanity to physical make the decision to evolve; the majority of us will not have the mental, emotional, and spiritual vigour to do so. We will fail to take that physical leap and let evolution flow naturally. So it's crucial that humanity disengages from the social rot we are all fed daily by the institutions of power. Otherwise, we as a species will not be strong enough, or ready to take that physical step in evolutions course when it arrives.

Ancient myths and legends thrive all over the world. Most of their methods and beliefs have been obliterated by the generations of governments and cultures throughout history. I believe many of these legends contain grains of truth about humanities roots. However, the ruling elite wish to suppress the true knowledge of humanities past and replace it with an invented cover story. It only takes a couple of generations for the mass public to accept the fantasy fairy-tale and forget the real truths our ancestors taught. Ancient people like the Aborigines, Native Americans, Cathars, Witches, and Pagans are just a few examples of tribes that have been virtually wiped off the face of the earth. They weren't just eradicated because they were bad or unholy people. They were eradicated because their beliefs and viewpoints were opposed to the long term plan of an all encompassing global elite. If your culture and way of life contradicts the ruling elite's game plan then eradication is a certainty. However, the elite don't just wipe them all out willy-nilly. A valid reason is invented to drum up public support against such tribes. False propaganda is circulated to paint a sinister picture of a hostile enemy. Then the ruling elite let the mass public risk their lives by doing all the fighting and dying for the "good" cause. As a token of their appreciation the ruling elite awards the survivors with a metal badge that costs pennies to make, which they call a medal. As silly as it all seems, this is how they operate.

One point that has always puzzled me is the fact that most of us can not see the Ruling Elite, UFOs, Aliens, or Ghosts. They either exist or they don't? However, many people throughout the world claim to have seen UFOs or Aliens and in some instances have actually been abducted by them. Many have seen apparitions, ghosts, and countless other strange phenomena that can't be explained rationally. How can these extraordinary occurrences be accounted for? It is a well know fact that all known matter is constructed from smaller units of substance called atoms. The atom is further constructed from smaller particles, known collectively as subatomic particles. The three main particles that make up the atom are: the proton, neutron, and electron. Most of us have been taught this at school. However, the proton and neutron can be further divided into smaller particles called quarks. Six different flavours of quarks exist. The flavours don't refer to taste as such, it's just a scientific term used to describe these subatomic particles. The six quarks are named Up, Down, Top, Bottom, Charmed, and Strange. For example the proton is composed of two Up quarks and one

Down quark; while the neutron is composed of two Down quarks and one Up quark. All known matter in the universe is composed of atoms with this arrangement of Up and Down quarks. No configuration of the other four quarks is known to exist. The Top, Bottom, Charmed, and Strange quarks have only been artificially manufactured using state of the art modern technology in physics laboratories. Here scientists have discovered that these four remaining quarks are extremely unstable and only exist for a brief moment in time. Nevertheless they exist. It's quite possible that three of these four remaining quarks could combine to form a similar configuration that mirrors the function of the real proton and neutron. If that were true, then whole atoms or even a whole universe could exist composed from this exotic quark matter. This existence could be viewed as some kind of alternative universe. The unique thing about this possible configuration of quarks is that an alternative universe could exist independently, with no interaction with our own. In other words, a whole world or universe could exist which would be fundamentally built from this alternative quark configuration. Furthermore, we would be unaware of its existence. Both universes could co-exist and occupy the same space, but neither would be aware of each others existence. This alternative universe would be as solid as our own. The only difference would be that this alternative universe would be constructed from top, bottom, strange, or charmed quarks rather than the usual up and down quarks. It is in this realm of existence I believe our ghosts, UFOs, spirits, and probably the ruling elite exist. Although, how can two objects or even whole universes occupy the same space? Naturally objects would bump into each other. The reason why objects don't bump into each other is because at the subatomic level these different quark configurations do not interact. Remember, only a very small area of the atom is occupied by physical particles. The rest is empty space. So when two atoms are on a collision course, the empty space within both atoms merely slips through each other. If the physical particles within the atom were on a direct collision course, then I believe the exotic quark matter would repel normal matter at infinitesimal closeness to avoid any impact. The quarks would simply slip around each other avoiding interacting or bonding while the atomic structure remained stable. The exotic quarks avoid any subatomic bonding with normal matter by subtly repelling each other at quark level proximity, just enough to skip by. Another analogy would be to envisage two different coloured balls of wool tangled up together. From a distance both balls of wool look as though they are occupying the same space. In truth each strand of wool weaves in and out of the other and remains independent.

It is similar to putting a stone in a river. The stone doesn't prevent the river from flowing. The river just diverts around the stone. Both stone and river don't bond together and become one object. Both remain independent occupying their own relevant space. The more fluid water has to flow around the more solid stone. Now, this is analogous of the more fluid spirit world moving around our so called solid world. This exotic quark configuration is more fluid than our own universe; it flows through and around our natural up and down quark configuration. All this matter phasing between each other is happening at the subatomic level. At this miniscule level subatomic particles are acting like two magnets repelling each other at extremely close proximity. When they get too close together they simply slip around each other and continue on their natural course.

These exotic quark configurations can-not be detected by any normal means because of the nature of subatomic composition. Up and down quark configurations in our regular universe can't interact with these exotic configurations. Therefore, we fail to detect or see an alternative reality existing right beside us. Failing to visibly see ghosts, UFOs, and spirits doesn't mean they don't exist. All matter emits electromagnetic radiation and that includes this alternative universe. Electromagnetic radiation including visible light is a beam of particles called photons emitted at a particular frequency. Humans only see electromagnetic radiation at a frequency within the visible light spectrum. If this frequency was raised higher or lower than visible light then humans would fail to see these photons. This is because our eyes are only designed to detect photons at visible light frequencies. Radio waves, Micro waves, Gamma rays, and Infrared, are a few examples of electromagnetic radiation where the frequency is not detectable by the human eye. Nevertheless, these frequencies exist. The whole frequency range of electromagnetic radiation being emitted in this alternative universe is unique. It isn't composed of a stream of photons being emitted at various frequencies like we are used to. An equivalent particle will exist in this alternative universe that mirrors the function of the photon. Remember, the photon is only the mediating light particle in our Up Down quark universe, not in the alternative quark universe. So a new light mediating particle must exist in this alternative quark composed universe. This new particle might even vibrate at the same frequency as visible light in our Up Down quark universe. However, we would still be unable to see it because our eyes are only designed to detect photons not any other exotic particle. Remember, light is a stream of photons emitted by the vibrating atom. Change the fundamental composition of the atomic nucleus then the stream of light emitting from it will change too.

I'm not saying any of this is fact. It's all speculative. So remain open minded and let the ideas filter through without too much harsh judgement. The reader might also be wondering what subatomic particles have got to do with human evolution. It is my belief that the whole universe is in a state of evolution and not just humankind. Furthermore, we don't just physically evolve into some other creature or animal. As I have described, evolution encompasses our physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual aspects. All must progress forward in unison, otherwise, one attribute stagnating can thwart the others from evolving. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. This is also true in respects to humanity's evolution. This is why in almost every area of our modern society we are being fed an endless onslaught of worthless trivia. It is designed to hamper and rot our physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual evolution. The global ruling elite are intentionally manoeuvring things to keep a constant weak link present within humankind's make-up. This is the weakest link that will ultimately prevent humans from naturally evolving forward.

Evolution doesn't just relate to living organisms. The whole evolutionary process is a universal phenomenon. The laws of physics are in a state of evolution too. That doesn't mean one set of crucial laws disappears and a new one suddenly appears in its place. Both coexist side by side. In the same way animals of different evolutionary strands inhabit planet earth. Humans are supposed to have evolved from Apes, but both Apes and Humans still coexist side by side. One doesn't suddenly die off and the other comes into existence. Amphibians are supposed to have evolved from fish; again both amphibians and fish still coexist on planet earth. Likewise, with all species, they have evolved from a previous state. This doesn't necessarily mean extinction for the preceding one. Both continue to coexist in relative harmony. However, a physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual progress will have been achieved by the next evolutionary jump. This alternative universe is just another evolutionary leap in the grand scheme of things. The laws of physics that govern the universe have evolved from the present Up and Down quark configuration into this new exotic quark matter. This doesn't mean our present quark configuration universe will become extinct. Both, our normal universe and the exotic quark universe will continue to coexist side by side.

This universal evolution can be seen by our current scientific astronomical knowledge of the skies. Today scientific experts believe the universe is in a state of expansion. This essentially means that all galaxies within the universe are currently hurtling away from each other, and the distance between them is increasing. However, scientists are unsure if this expansion will continue indefinitely, or if the universe will slow down and eventually collapse inwards under its own gravitational weight. So according to modern scientific theories the universe has two possible outcomes. Either, all matter will expand outwards into infinity, or contract inwards crashing into a singular point in time and space. It's like a rocket blasting off from planet earth into space. If the rocket doesn't have enough power and fuel to break free from earth's gravity then it will simply fall back to earth with a bang. If on the other hand the rocket had too much power and fuel then it would continue hurtling into deep space forever. This scenario describes the scientific view of the universe. Although, I believe a third possible outcome exists for the fate of the universe. What if the rocket had just enough fuel, velocity, and power to reach a stable orbit around the earth? Remember, once a rocket is in orbit around the earth no more fuel would be necessary to keep it going. Therefore, an endless supply of fuel would not be necessary. Momentum along with zero friction in space would keep the rocket in orbit indefinitely. Likewise, the universe would not necessarily continue expanding endlessly, or contract into a singular point in space. It's possible that all the matter in the universe will fall into a giant stable orbit. Other examples in nature support this orbit theory. Just look at the solar system and how all the planets and satellites orbit around the Sun. Even galaxies are massive spiral orbits made up of millions of stars. Furthermore, the atom which is the building block of the whole universe is a mini solar system in its own right with numerous orbiting electrons whizzing around its nucleus. Therefore, it is not inconceivable that the expanding universe will eventually fall into some giant stable orbit mirroring the rest of nature's forms.

As you can see evolution is occurring at every point in existence. This exotic quark configuration is humankind's next evolutionary jump. The ruling elite are constantly stifling our progression onto that natural level. Remember, good and evil are qualities that exist at all stages of evolution. Just because one has attained an evolved state doesn't necessarily mean a sense of justice and morality will prevail. Good and evil follow all species across all levels of evolution. The most famous example of this would be the biblical character Satan along with his demonic followers. Satan was an evolved spiritual being that deciding to take an alternative course from natural evolution. A spiritual being is just another way of referring to life that exists in this exotic quark universe. Satan's decision to go against nature was in effect his attempt at stifling or halting humankind's progression along evolution's natural course. It is my belief that Satan sits at the apex of the ruling elite clan with his demonic followers or minions acting as the main body of the ruling elite.

There are numerous legends and ancient texts throughout the world that speak of demon possession. The bible has many such stories. If demon possession can truly occur then how is it all possible? Can Satan and his henchmen really infiltrate another human body and control it for their own advantage? I believe in some instances a compatible DNA link exists between humans and the beings in this advanced exotic quark universe. They too have DNA just like humans, but their DNA is composed of exotic quark matter.

All matter whether living or not has a spectroscopic signature. This essentially means that all matter in the universe emits a certain frequency of electromagnetic radiation. In fact all known chemical elements emit a unique frequency of electromagnetic radiation. When I say all matter, that also includes living organisms and DNA, because all are composed from the basic chemical elements. It is spectroscopy that enables scientists to measure the electromagnetic frequencies and determine the elemental composition of distant stars and planets. Similarly, humans also emit an electromagnetic signature blend that identifies their DNA composition. This signature blend is as unique as a fingerprint. This individual human signature blend is a result of our DNA composition, and everyone has their own exclusive blend. However, certain human DNA signature frequencies are close to the DNA signature frequencies of Satan and his demonic followers. Hence, some humans have an automatic compatibility that facilitates satanic possession. The only essential difference would be between our normal or exotic quark arrangements. Satan and his henchmen exist in this exotic quark universe, which is a more evolved state than our normal universe. That doesn't mean humans with a similar DNA signature blend are more evolved or evil as such. The link between our Up and Down quark universe and the exotic quark universe is a persons DNA frequency signature. Individuals may not even be aware of their specific DNA compatibility. Nevertheless, it leaves their biological body open to satanic possession and opens a conscious or unconscious link to this alternative quark universe. Having this DNA link facilitates a person to be unconsciously yet subtly programmed by these demonic forces. This usually occurs at a young age. The DNA recipient quickly becomes accustomed to the programming and accepts it unquestionably without understanding the dangerous impact it might have on their life. The brainwashing techniques are slow but incessant and the DNA link is very rarely broken. Remember, Satan and his henchmen are superior to normal human beings. They can and will manipulate humans in the most subtle and intelligent ways without the compatible recipient ever realising it. If a persons DNA link is compatible then a gradual indoctrination of their beliefs and philosophies will slowly be instilled from a youthful age. The recipient is totally unaware this is happening and if anything blames it on a vivid imagination. In more severe cases where the link is stronger then indoctrination takes the form of prophetic visions and messages from the so called 'other side.' All these happenings are indicative hallmarks of satanic influence upon human affairs. So spiritualists claiming to have the ability to contact the 'other side,' might actually be dabbling in a dangerous activity. Even though they truly believe they are contacting the 'other side' for beneficial reasons. Satan and his henchmen will always hide their evil acts behind a fake mask of righteousness. Avoiding such pastimes would be a prudent and cautious step if one wanted to evade satanic possession. The biblical scripture in the book of Leviticus backs this up beautifully.

Leviticus Chapter 19: Verse 31: “Do not turn to mediums or seek out spiritists, for you will be defiled by them. I am the Lord your God.”

Certain recipients undoubtedly become staunch believers of their profound visions or messages. Subsequently, they will preach their experiences to the world unaware that it is a satanic trap. If this satanic regime promoted an aggressive philosophy then naturally most humans would decide not to follow. Naturally, Satan is a wolf disguised in sheep's clothing. He will always cloak himself in a number of benevolent causes. It is these apparent benevolent causes that dupe the recipients into believing and fighting for its advancement. These benevolent causes have manifested into the various religions and institutions of power that are rife on the planet today.

Furthermore, if Satan can mould the beliefs and philosophies of compatible DNA recipients from a young age, he will obviously indoctrinate hundreds from many different backgrounds. In this way he can manipulate the recipients to work together for a common benevolent cause. Naturally, it will be his so called benevolent cause disguised under the cloak of a belief system or philosophical dogma. I believe this is how certain people attain influential positions of power in the world. It's a natural human behaviour to gravitate towards your own kind. Therefore, anyone who has a DNA compatibility link with this exotic quark universe will gravitate towards similar people striving to accomplish a common cause. You can see this pseudo dogmatic determination in political leaders across the world. No doubt many of them have experienced profound visions or messages in their youth. These visions or messages would have moulded their character and world view in line with Satan's plan. These leaders are unaware they are playing out Satan's agenda on the world stage, and truly believe they are fighting for justice and freedom. People feel upbeat and positive when opportunities arise in life where fate or destiny seems to have played a hand in things. Satan utilizes this sneaky trick to bring together similar DNA compatible blends to fight for a common purpose. All along, these compatible recipients have been subtly programmed and manipulated throughout their life. This is a prime example of how Satan manoeuvres these DNA compatible recipients into positions of power. They truly feel destiny has somehow selected them for a special purpose.

The whole philosophy of these satanic forces is to control humanity on a global level. They will never achieve this aim, unless, a watertight disguise exists to dupe the masses. So visions of a benevolent kind are invented and fed to the compatible DNA recipients in order to carry out Satan's work. It is Satan and his demonic followers dwelling in this alternative quark realm that decide who, when, and where to communicate with humans, not the other way around. Anyone within the mass global public having this unique DNA strand effectively has inherited the mark of the beast. Individuals might be unaware they have a DNA link with the satanic realm and a possible predisposition for possession. The beast is the global power on earth which is ultimately controlled by Satan. His influence dominates the entire political and economic institutions of power. The biblical scripture in the book of Revelation below confirms:

Revelation Chapter 13: Verse 18: "This calls for wisdom. If anyone has insight, let him calculate the number of the beast, for it is man's number. His number is 666."

Revelation Chapter 12: Verse 7-8: “But he was not strong enough, and they lost their place in heaven. The great dragon was hurled down—that ancient serpent called the devil, or Satan, who leads the whole world astray. He was hurled to the earth, and his angels with him.”

The number 666 as it states in the scripture above refers not to Satan, but the beast. So 666 is the number of the beasts. The beast is man’s number and I believe it relates primarily to the institutions of power that control humanity on planet earth. However, why would the number 666 refer to man? Has this number got any important significance? Well it is quite astonishing to know that planet earth travels at approximately 66’600 mph as it journeys around the sun. This is an ancient scripture and the knowledge of the planet’s velocity wasn’t officially known back in biblical times. It’s amazing how astronomical measurements tie in beautifully with some of these biblical scriptures. “If anyone has insight, let him calculate the number of the beast,” The word, calculate obviously means to use arithmetic, because it is numbers we are dealing with here. It is man’s number, and where does man reside? Planet Earth! From the scripture above Satan and his henchmen were hurled down to earth, “who leads the whole world astray.”

That is why the government is relentlessly pushing forward the ID card and chip technology in all its forms. It’s not being implemented upon us to reduce crime figures or stop illegal immigrants. These reasons are just decoys to camouflage their secret underlying intentions. Their main aim is to continually monitor our genetic evolution in real-time to weed out any potential threats. Furthermore, we will be electronically charged 24 hours per day in all aspects of our lives for the privilege. The ID card and chip technology is only being implemented as a convenient stalking horse. Once that has been established the real purpose behind the stalking horse will become apparent. The subcutaneous microchip injected under the skin in their real aim. This will not just monitor our movements and genetic evolution, but it will have the capability to alter our mental, emotional, and behaviour patterns. The chip has the capability to be programmed remotely to react with our internal biological responses and take appropriate steps to counteract. In other words, anyone stepping out of line from the governments imposed dictatorial rules, runs the possible risk of their chip being reprogrammed. The chip could be remotely reprogrammed to make a person forgetful, calm, obedient, hyperactive, or even kill them. In fact an endless string of emotional responses could be enforced upon people without their authority. Furthermore, nobody will be able to go about their daily business unless authorised by the state. All activity would be monitored, even our daily movements and transactions. One thing the government is heading towards is a moneyless society. This means no more paper money, and all economic transactions will be carried out electronically. Therefore, nobody will be able to sell or buy a thing unless authorised to do so by the state. Again this ties up beautifully with the biblical scripture in the book of Revelation below.

Revelation Chapter 13: Verse 16-17: “He also forced everyone, small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on his right hand or on his forehead, so that no one could buy or sell unless he had the mark, which is the name of the beast or the number of his name.”

The electronic ID card and chip technology is being pushed upon us by the day. The technological infrastructure is already in place to implement this virtual prison upon the masses. The technological net already surrounds us at every corner in society. The government is just waiting for the green light to set the wheels in motion that will finally bring about the Orwellian state. Another massive terrorist attack in the US or UK is the one excuse the governments are waiting for. The public will cave in under pressure and accept the chip willingly. They will embrace the disguised fascist state readily with open arms. What the public will be ignorant of, is the fact that the ruling elite will have covertly orchestrated the whole terrorist attack from the beginning. Micro-chipping the whole population will be conveniently disguised under the national security banner. Then meekly everyone will be injected with this technological chip, except for a few protesting rebels. The few honourable rebels will be presented by the media as common criminals, terrorists, or worse still, unpatriotic. The sting in the tail will be that the microchip will subtly but eventually alter our DNA to attune with this exotic quark universe. That doesn't mean humanity will be more evolved because our DNA is attuned to the exotic quark universe. In fact humanity will be unaware that it is being held in a spiritual and mental prison for eternity. We will all be biologically monitored and charged 24 hours per day, and open to satanic possession without our knowledge. Our natural path of evolution will be irreversibly halted indefinitely. That's worse than slavery!

Satan is effectively roaming around the earth like a roaring lion seeking to devour humankind's evolutionary progression. Again another biblical scripture confirms this is the case.

1 Peter Chapter 5: Verse 8: “Be self-controlled and alert. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour.”

In the book of 1st Peter, the biblical lion is a reference to the sun. The Lion was symbolic of the British Empire, not just due to its strength and power, but also because its mane symbolised the rays of the sun. Likewise, this scripture is a word play on the power of the sun and how it has ultimate authority to influence human evolution.

CHAPTER 8

The Great Pyramid

The global ruling elite did not infiltrate the institutions of power as we seem to think. The main institutions of power were deliberately invented by the global elite to assist them in taking control over the planet. Through these institutions the elite can dictate and control the mass public in all major areas of our lives. The elite are a hidden mystical cabal maintaining positions of power behind the scenes. The machinery of the establishment has been designed in such a way as to prevent infiltration from outside influences. At the same time it appears to represent and support public interests. It constantly performs a well rehearsed routine to dupe the masses into believing it is there to help, when in actual fact it does the exact opposite. We hear this hypocritical rhetoric daily on the television in the form of news broadcasts. A main part of this charade is to persistently wear the pretend mask of democracy. In the long run the public become complacent and relinquish their power to these so called democratic institutions. The very people we believe who are representing the country. In actual fact these institutions are gobbling up power faster than you can imagine.

These institutions in their present form might seem like a modern day invention. In actual fact the elite were in power well before our so called modern institutions came into being. The mystical elite survived and flourished hiding behind a variety of power structures. Monarchies, Communism, Marxism, Leninism, Fascism, or even Democracy are all forms of dictatorship that serve as vehicles for the elite to screen themselves, while keeping the masses under strict control. This included the royal dominance behind the ancient Egyptian Pharaohs. Back in ancient Egyptian times the ruling elite concealed themselves behind the royal establishment that controlled the Pharaoh. In the previous chapters I described how our measuring units and some religious scriptures relate to the heavens. All this was designed and implemented back in ancient times to shape and condition humanity. The double meaning behind our numbering system points towards this hidden plot. I believe a master plan was hatched back in antiquity by the elite to acquire total control over humanity and tamper with our evolutionary journey. The sun is the mechanism driving all evolution forward. This is why our measuring systems relate to the sun and all its various aspects. The time for humankind's evolutionary leap was known back in antiquity. Through their prime position of control the elite could orchestrate the building of the great pyramid. This was to function as a numerical marker for future generations. This manufactured numerical marker indicated the specific date in the future when humanity would make that potential evolutionary leap forward. I believe that numerical marker was the great pyramid and it permanently points towards 2012. The great pyramid is literally a calendar build from stone that points towards a specific date in the future.

The great pyramid is an absolute historical gem which has existed from the birth of humanity and has survived throughout Egypt's turbulent past. To think of all the mighty rulers and famous people that have set foot in this incomparable land boggles the mind. Even Jesus when he escaped Israel with Mary and Joseph found refuge in Egypt. In his time the pyramids would have still been almost three thousand years old. No doubt he would have pondered upon the exact purpose of the whole Giza plateau. Or maybe he understood its significance and remained quiet. It's strange that the bible doesn't mention anything regarding the pyramids, because the land of Egypt is synonymous with biblical scripture. There is a complex web of corridors, chambers, and shafts running through the central region of the great pyramid. No comprehensive answers have ever been ascertained to account for its internal design features. Everything is impressive and meticulously assembled here and the ancient Egyptians left nothing to chance. Personally, I believe Jesus knew exactly what the great pyramid stood for.

Anyone that has visited the Giza complex will be awe struck by the sheer scale of these enormous structures. It's difficult to comprehend why anyone would undertake such a task almost 5000 years ago. Five thousand years; just ponder upon that length of time for a moment. It's difficult to imagine because our lives are so short in comparison. Nobody can say for certainty what transpired away back in those early days. One thing is for sure; something remarkable must have occurred to stimulate the ancient Egyptians into building the worlds oldest and most famous structures. The fact that the pyramids still remain intact today might just indicate why they were initially built. No building exists for that length of time and remains in good condition by accident. This simple inference can only lead to one conclusion. The ancient Egyptians purposely designed and constructed them to last. This might sound like an obvious observation, but it's an important point to remember.

One startling fact that blatantly hits any newcomer to the plateau is the sheer height of the pyramids. The great pyramid stands a staggering 481 feet tall. Now let me put that into some kind of perspective. The Eiffel tower is 984 feet tall and was built back in 1889. Currently, the tallest building in the world is the Petronas twin towers in Kuala Lumpur, which stands at a mind boggling 1483 feet. Ok the pyramids don't quite match the Petronas twin towers or even the Eiffel tower in height, but that doesn't necessarily mean it loses its special status. Remember, the Petronas twin towers were constructed using state of the art materials and techniques. Engineers utilised all forms of modern machinery, like computers, cranes, bulldozers and scientific principles. Back in those ancient Egyptian days no such machinery existed. Even today modern engineers have admitted that it would be almost impossible to recreate a copy of the great pyramid without using modern sophisticated techniques. Even if they did use modern tools and machinery, it would still be a complex task to reconstruct one. When you take this factor into consideration the Petronas twin towers don't quite cast a mighty shadow over the pyramids. Today there is fierce competition between engineers, architects, and businessmen to build bigger, better, and more elaborate structures. The real driving force behind modern skyscrapers is utilizing maximum space in order to receive maximum profit. Back in ancient Egypt, such ruthless business competition to build ever taller buildings just didn't exist. Even if the ancient Egyptians really wanted to construct the tallest building in the world then a 90 foot structure would have done the job nicely. Bear in mind that no skyscrapers existed back then to compete with. Furthermore, land space was not a problem and it would have been far simpler to build outwards rather than upwards.

It is my belief the pyramids were built to withstand the rigours of time. There are many inbuilt features supporting this idea. The pyramid structure itself is a perfect example, because no other geometrical shape has the same overall stability. It might seem like a trivial observation, but it's almost impossible to topple over a pyramid. Ancient monuments like obelisks, towers, or columns are more prone to crumble and topple. How many obelisks and towers have survived from the ancient world? Not many, and the few that do exist lie almost in ruins. Not only is the pyramid unique in this respect, but the majority of its mass is solid and only a very small percentage of its interior is hollow. These two factors coupled together make it almost impossible for the pyramid to cave-in, topple, or collapse. This gives the pyramid structure unmatched strength. The kind of strength and sturdiness needed to last five thousand years. The pyramid's strength is further supported by its sheer height. The simple argument being that a taller building with a hulking mass will last longer than a smaller one. This is the real reason behind building a 481 foot structure rather than an undersized monument.

One enigma that always crops up whenever the pyramids are mentioned is the massive stone blocks used in its construction. I don't know how many times I have heard people point out this unique feature. Approximately 2.5 million blocks were used just to build the great pyramid alone. Each block roughly measures 1.5 metres cubed and weighs as much as a family car. If it took one person one week to completely chisel out one limestone block from a quarry, then it would require a total of 47'913 years to finish the chiselling work. Obviously more than one man worked on the project, but it clearly shows how much labour was required. So how many men did actually toil away at the chiselling work? To be perfectly honest nobody really knows. A key factor would depend upon the time scale the Pharaoh wanted the pyramid to be finished by. Realistically speaking, the Pharaoh would probably want the pyramid completed within his lifetime. Therefore, a period of say thirty years would be a reasonable estimate. In that case, it would require 1597 men each to chisel out one complete block per week constantly for thirty years. A massive amount of effort in anyone's language! If I were to line up all the 2.5 million blocks used in the great pyramid construction, they would stretch approximately from London to Jerusalem. That's a rough distance of about 2330 miles. For example, compare that with the Great Wall of China, which only measures 1500 miles long and was built thousands of years later. Even then it still took the Chinese several hundred years to complete the wall. This effectively illustrates the enormous task ancient Egypt undertook in manufacturing not just the blocks but also the pyramids. It also demonstrates that an inconceivable amount of manpower, ingenuity, and skill was employed. Furthermore, this doesn't take into consideration the two other pyramids on the Giza plateau.

Remember, the above figures are only estimates. It doesn't take into consideration other necessary jobs like; designing the pyramid complex, transporting the blocks over absurd distances, lifting them up incredible heights, feeding and housing the workers involved, and last but not least building the other two pyramids on the plateau. Added to this painstaking work was the degree of accuracy employed. These limestone blocks weren't just roughly hewn out of the quarry, but were carved precisely square and cleanly dressed. For example, the Kings chamber which lies at the heart of the great pyramid is solely made of solid granite. Granite is an extremely hard stone to manage and the high degree of precision achieved is amazing. These slabs are literally as smooth as a babies bum. Each of these granite slabs were hand carved and weigh approximately 70 tons a piece. Furthermore, they were manually transported from several hundred miles away. Remember, all this work was accomplished without the use of cranes or modern machinery. Take into account that only a handful of modern day cranes exist that have the capability to raise extremely heavy weights. How on earth the ancient Egyptians managed to haul these gigantic slabs across the country and lift them into pinpoint position is absolutely remarkable. Most people assume the builders of the pyramids were slaves forced to toil away endlessly in brutal conditions. If that were true, do you really think such an incredible structure bestowed with a large degree of accuracy could be achieved by forced unskilled labour?

The sheer size of the blocks the ancient Egyptians used is astonishing and often puzzles many people. It would have been far simpler for them to construct the pyramid using small manageable blocks that could be manually transported from hand to hand as the pyramid grew in height. This would have prevented the mammoth task of hauling these monster blocks over long distances across desert terrain and then raising them up vast heights. It's difficult to understand why they opted for this method, because using small blocks would have eliminated the need for massive pulleys, hoists, gantries, and manpower. The answer becomes clear if they wanted the pyramid to last for thousands of years. Thieves would have persistently pillaged and picked away at the stonework throughout the centuries if small blocks had been used. However, the ancient Egyptians had foresight and used multi-ton blocks instead. This is one major reason why the pyramids stand intact today and not in some dismantled heap of rubble. Large blocks are still open to robbery and general abuse, but because of their cumbersome size it makes it extremely difficult for thieves to casually remove them. Even still, the exterior of the pyramids have taken a beating throughout the millennia. However, it still endures the passage of time purely due to the robustness of these large blocks.

Another highly debatable point official Egyptology stands unwaveringly by is that the ancient Egyptians only possessed primitive knowledge. According to them they didn't even understand the concept of the wheel. It's an important point to mention here because this official assessment goes totally against all common sense. I believe humans have an intuitive awareness from birth of basic geometrical shapes. A classic example of this can be clearly observed in young children playing with their toys. Children instinctively know that a ball will roll forward when it is kicked or pushed. Even my pet dog knows how to steer a football with its nose or catch it in its mouth when thrown. The child and dog must understand instinctively what a ball and its properties are in the first place. If they didn't it would be impossible for them to carry out such simple tasks. I'm not saying that children or even my pet dog understand the complex mathematics behind such geometry, but they can grasp the essential properties of such shapes. If a dog has the mental capacity to manipulate a ball with its nose, then it doesn't take a scientist to deduce that humans must be capable of far greater geometrical understanding. The same principle applies to the builders of the great pyramid. They must have been aware of a pyramid shape in the first place, otherwise it would have been impossible for them to construct one. The fact that the great pyramid exists today proves this point. Surely if they understood how to build a massive elaborate pyramid then obviously they were aware of other complex shapes like the circle. (Circle=Wheel).

To further support the claim that the ancient Egyptians understood the concept of the wheel, all we have to do is take a trip to the Cairo museum. Sitting magnificently on the first floor lies the wealth of treasure Howard Carter unearthed from King Tutankhamen's tomb. Included within this stockpile of priceless treasures are three glorious life sized golden chariots with real wheels attached. It's difficult to describe the true marvel of these chariots. To me it's an overwhelming piece of evidence that strengthens the case that the ancient Egyptians knew the exact concept of the wheel. It often surprises me when I watch television documentaries depicting the various methods on how the ancient Egyptians managed to construct the pyramids. Almost all of them peddle the same theme of slaves struggling away relentlessly without the use of wheels, pulleys, or basic mechanical devices. It is utter lunacy to think that primitive people without the knowledge of the wheel could design, build, organise, and manage the construction of the pyramids. These pyramids were probably built over several generations and that level of organisation certainly could not be achieved by primitive people. Although, I believe the use of animal power was utilised to maximum efficiency. The ancient Egyptians had horses, camels, bulls, and elephants at their disposal. No doubt these animals would have assisted in moving giant blocks. Why have hundreds of men simultaneously pulling on ropes, struggling to move a large block across the desert without the use of wheels. An elephant or team of horses attached to a four wheeled cart could achieve this back breaking task effortlessly. Simple solutions like these, answer an age old problem easily and without introducing some elaborate hidden method. The impressive life-size golden chariots discovered by Howard Carter even had harnesses for attaching onto horses. Now, why would the ancient Egyptians have chariots capable of harnessing onto horses if they couldn't even grasp the basic concept of a wheel? Only one answer exists. Horses, camels, bulls, and elephants were utilized extensively in their daily lives, for farming and most other manually demanding jobs. You certainly don't get anything more demanding than building the pyramids at Giza. Using elephants to aid in the logistical movement of blocks would have saved the Egyptians years of back breaking labour. Even then, building the pyramids would have still required a massive degree of planning and manpower.

The pyramids have no defined roof. This point appears naïve, but it's often overlooked by many observers and researchers. Obviously this is due to its pyramidal shape, but there is more to this simple fact than meets the eye. Not having a roof is a very convenient deterrent against vandals and thieves. It prevents anyone from climbing its sides because there's no summit to reach. Having no obvious summit removes any reason to climb and avoids anyone accessing a convenient platform to build on, dig on, vandalise, or even gain entry from above. Its sheer height alone is a major disincentive. If someone were courageous enough to scale the outside slope then it would be extremely difficult and dangerous. The original casing blocks that once lined the entire outer face were cut precisely smooth and would have been extremely slippery and steep. Even then, no obvious platform or summit existed, so why climb? This is a major reason why the pyramids have not suffered from excessive vandalism. Unfortunately, due to several earthquakes over the centuries most of these casing blocks have fallen off. Only the underlying blocks now exist which forms a ziggurat. (A ziggurat is a step pyramid)

All ancient buildings have taken a pounding in one form or another throughout their turbulent histories. Old buildings decay for various reasons ranging from theft, earthquakes, vandalism, bad design, and weathering from the elements. The four sides of the pyramid are unique because they slope at a very steep angle of 52 degrees acting as a natural run-off for rain water. Any water falling will readily slide down its sides onto the ground below. The same principle applies to most house roofs all over the world. The sloped roof design allows rain water to naturally run into the gutter below which eventually disappears down the drainpipe. It's the most effective way to prevent flooding when there is a heavy downpour. Essentially the pyramid is a giant stable roof that is naturally shaped to prevent weathering and flooding because of its sloped design. Rain water will effortlessly run down its sides causing minimum erosion. Again this is one explanation why the pyramids remain in good condition almost five thousand years later.

There are many stories of ancient floods all over the world. The great flood detailed in the bible is the most famous, but whether it actually occurred or not is uncertain. One thing that has endured from the so called flood era is the fantastic legendary stories that are abound worldwide, and of course the Sphinx. Why the Sphinx? Well some experts believe the Sphinx has suffered from excessive water erosion. Unfortunately, dating the Sphinx has remained an ongoing problem. Most experts agree that some time in the distant past torrential rain must have fallen heavily on the Giza plateau area. According to them, this explanation would account for the unique weathering characteristics the Sphinx shows. Strangely enough, all three pyramids fail to show the same weathering features. That can only lead to one conclusion. The pyramids were built after the time period of this torrential rain fall. Could this torrential rain fall be the great flood of biblical times? If so, then it boggles the mind to think what era in history the Sphinx originated from; considering the pyramids are almost five thousand years old.

The Sphinx is a representation of a Lion, and faces eastward towards the rising sun, which I believe is symbolic of the Lion that represents the UK. It also shows that the global ruling elite possibly existed back in those ancient times. It may seem incredible that the pyramids still exist in pristine condition today after so many millennia, while the Sphinx shows extreme signs of wear. Perhaps the rational answer would be that both were constructed at different time periods. Was the Sphinx built sometime before the great flood, in an era dating back to ancient Atlantis? Were the pyramids constructed after this colossal flood that possibly caused the destruction of Atlantis? If so, maybe the pyramids were constructed as a warning sign in stone for future generations to beware of. Nobody really knows, but it's clear why the ancient Egyptians opted to build a pyramid shaped structure. It has stood the test of time and resisted persistent attacks from nature and humankind spanning millennia.

Another staggering fact is that all three pyramids on the Giza plateau are perfectly orientated on a north, south, west, east alignment. All three entry points to the pyramids are suspiciously located on their north faces. This is no accident and must certainly have been intended from its initial design stage. These colossal monoliths certainly weren't built by primitive people with limited knowledge. I believe the ancient Egyptians were anything but primitive and knew exactly what they were doing with a very precise purpose in mind. These were no mere tombs, but a carefully designed edifice that embodied an important message. That message is written within the immortal stonework of the pyramids.

The pyramids have outlived all other successive structures throughout history, which clearly demonstrates their resilience. This fact alone should be enough to convince most people they were built to withstand the rigours of time. To survive five thousand years, the ancient Egyptians had to employ all the techniques I have outlined above. Failing to do so would have guaranteed the destruction of the pyramids long ago. If I were faced with the huge task of building a monument capable of surviving that length of time, then a solid pyramid shaped structure would undoubtedly be my first choice.

According to official Egyptology the true purpose of the pyramids were burial tombs for the dead pharaohs. However, this theory doesn't make sense when you consider the superb design and detail used in every aspect. If the ancient Egyptians wanted to build a burial tomb for the dead pharaoh and his treasure then an underground chamber would have provided much more security. Why go to enormous lengths building a giant structure above ground for all to see? It's like putting a giant flag on the spot where the Pharaoh and his treasure are located. It effectively invites any potential robbers straight to the treasure. This makes absolutely no sense at all. In fact the pyramid offers next to nothing in security for the Pharaoh and his treasure. All other ancient Egyptian tombs were constructed and hidden underground in order to safeguard the Pharaoh and his treasure. King Tutankhamen's tomb is a classic example. Just look at the priceless treasures buried underground along with him. Ok, in reality it has been uncovered, but you can clearly see the logic in an underground tomb.

So, building a giant pyramid above ground for the purpose of a tomb makes no sense at all. Creating a structure with such accuracy and size simply boggles the mind. What was the real function behind such elaborate and extensive craftsmanship? Well I believe the ancients knew more than we traditionally give them credit for. I truly believe they were well aware of scientific disciplines like mathematics, geometry, astronomy, and building techniques that contradict historical perceptions. The great pyramid isn't just a fantastic historical monument testifying to the craftsmanship of the ancients. This structure was built in such a way that it incorporates a numerical connection relating to the sun and its rotation. It is these numerical connections I would like to describe in detail.

It is a well known fact that a circle's circumference is twice its radius, multiplied by 3.1415. The number 3.1415 is commonly known as pi. The great pyramid encapsulates this pi configuration within its structure in order to represent a perfect circle. If I doubled the height of the great pyramid, which is 481 feet tall, then multiplied the result by 3.1415, the answer would equal 3022 feet. This is the exact length of the great pyramid's base perimeter. This calculation can only be achieved if the great pyramid's faces are sloped at an angle of almost 52 degrees, otherwise this pi configuration could not be achieved. So in effect, the great pyramid is representing a circle by incorporating pi into its construction.

When anyone mentions the word pyramid we are automatically inclined to conjure up an image of ancient Egypt. It is no coincidence that Egypt was chosen as the location on which to construct the pyramids. The various units and measurements that relate to the heavens is the key to understanding why Egypt was chosen. The great pyramid is located at latitude 30 degrees north of the equator. Amazingly, on the winter solstice, the southern face of the great pyramid is 90 degrees square against the sun's altitude. In effect the southern face of the great pyramid is indicating this important date by being orientated square against the sun. Remember, the winter solstice, which falls on the 21st of December, is also the prophesised date of the end of the Mayan calendar of 2012. If the great pyramid had been positioned further north or south of this location then this important date could not be indicated. Unless of course the four faces of the pyramid were constructed at an alternative angle to achieve this 90 degree alignment. However, this would disrupt the pi configuration. That is why the great pyramid had to be built 30 degrees north of the equator. This explains the latitude, but what about its longitude? The great pyramid is built on a longitude of 31 Deg 08 Minutes east of GMT. At a glance this measurement doesn't make much sense; but this measurement is based upon Greenwich, London being the world meridian. However, the world meridian wasn't always located on Greenwich, London. Back in October 1884, the International Meridian Conference in Washington DC decided that the meridian line should run through Greenwich, London rather than Paris. Before this date the world meridian line ran through Paris. A total of 25 nations were at this meridian conference, which amounted to 41 delegates. I couldn't help notice the 25.41 stick out like a sore thumb. Maybe I'm clutching at straws here; then again this is how the global elite operate.

The Paris meridian runs through the Paris observatory and lies on a longitude of 2 Deg 20 Minutes East of GMT. (Strangely, there are 2.20 pounds contained within 1 kilogram.) However, there is a solar observatory in Paris that lies on a longitude of 2 Deg 14 minutes East of GMT. I believe the solar observatory is a much more importance site. Primarily we are dealing with the Sun, so the solar observatory would make sense in which to take our longitude from. The Great Pyramid has a longitude of 31 Deg 8 Minutes East of GMT. The difference between both these longitudes is exactly 28 Deg 54 Minutes. Incredibly it takes the Moon 28.53 days to rotate through all its phases from new moon to new moon. Again, maybe I'm clutching at straws, but it is a bit too close for comfort.

Strangely enough, the Paris meridian line runs through the area where the medieval castle of Renne Le Chateau is located. This Chateau is the centre of a renowned mystery attracting conspiracy theorists from all over the globe. The mystery is centred on a priest named Berenger Saunier, who was appointed to Renne le Chateau back in June 1885. Less than one year after the new meridian line moved to Greenwich. He supposedly discovered ancient parchments that revealed a profound secret the Catholic Church wanted to keep covered up. This area is also the location for best selling books: 'Holy Blood, Holy Grail', and 'The Da Vinci Code'. The Paris meridian line also runs through a village not far from Renne Le Chateau called, Alet Le Bain. This village is where Nostradamus' Grandparents stayed. Furthermore, it is also the region where the Inquisition took place against the ancient Cathars, who were slaughtered at Montsegur. Presently the world meridian line runs through Greenwich, London. It is interesting to note that this meridian line also runs through Lourdes in southern France. The reader will be aware that Lourdes is a famous Christian pilgrimage place. It was made famous due to the visions by the young girl, Bernadette Soubirous of the Virgin Mary, on 11th February 1858, in France. Furthermore, both Lourdes and Renne Le Chateau are only 5 minutes of Latitude apart; which amounts to about 12 miles. So Renne Le Chateau lies on the Paris meridian while Lourdes lies on the Greenwich meridian.

In fact France itself is a location where many historic, yet mystical events have taken place. Besides, the Cather Inquisition, Jesus Bloodline Mystery, Renne Le Chateau Mystery, Nostradamus, and Lourdes; there was also the famous Knights Templar slaughter of Friday 13th October 1307; the trench warfare in the 1st World War, where millions died horrifically; the D-Day Landings of the 2nd World War, where again millions died; the Nazi's search for the Holy Grail which mainly focused on France; and most recently the CERN subatomic particle accelerator experiments investigating the true nature of time. The CERN accelerator lies suspiciously on a longitude of 6 Deg 6 Min 6 Sec East of GMT. (666). CERN also went operational on the 10th of September 2008. Strangely enough, this date is the 254th day of the year, because 2008 was a leap year. One major factor that should alarm people is that the CERN logo actually incorporates three overlapping sixes.

It is my belief that the great pyramid is a large stone calendar representing the heavenly motions. Furthermore, this pyramidal calendar is frozen like a stone grave that permanently pinpoints a particular date in the future. Other details confirm this might be the case. For example, the base perimeter of the great pyramid currently measures 3022 feet. However, there is foundation blocks embedded within the bedrock below the great pyramid. These foundation blocks protrude from each side of the pyramid of an average length of 2.5 feet beyond the first step. Surely this extra length must be an integral part of the great pyramid's measurement. I believe this should be added into the equation when measuring the pyramids perimeter. Therefore, each side of the pyramid would have to be measured from one corner foundation block to the next. This would result in a larger base perimeter length of perhaps 3043.66 feet rather than 3022 feet. The reader might be wondering what all these figures have got to do with a pyramidal stone calendar. Well, the perimeter of the great pyramid relates to the numbers I outlined in the previous chapters.

Table 10 below shows how the pyramid calculations tie in with the heavenly measurements. On the first row of the table below, you can see the pyramid's perimeter is expressed in feet, which amounts to 3043.66 feet. If this length is divided into 365.24 equal parts, then each part would measure 8.33 feet. 8.33 is the number of seconds it takes for light to travel between the sun and the earth. On the second row of the table, the perimeter is expressed in inches, which amounts to 36524 inches. This mirrors the 365.24 days contained within one year. If this length is divided into 365.24 equal parts then each part would measure 100 inches. 100 inches equals 10 complete revolutions of the sun. On the third row of the table, the pyramid's perimeter is expressed in centimetres, which amounts to 92770 cm. If this length is divided into 365.24 equal parts then each part would measure 254 cm. This length equals 254 days and also equates with the 25.4 day revolution of the sun. On the fourth row of the table the pyramid's perimeter is expressed in metres, which amounts to 927.70 metres. If this length was divided into 365.24 equal parts then each part would measure 2.54 metres. The reader should be well acquainted by now with the number 2.54.

You can see from the table below, the answers are expressed in feet, inches, centimetres, and metres. One day expressed in feet equals 8.33 feet; one day expressed in inches equals 100 inches; one day expressed in centimetres equals 254 centimetres; and finally, one day expressed in metres equals 2.54 metres. Furthermore, the 254th day of the year is September the 11th which is no coincidence.

The nuts and bolts of the theory I'm putting forward is that the great pyramid points towards a heavenly calendar represented primarily by the sun. This is why the number 254 is prominent within the pyramids perimeter. It is also why the southern face of the pyramid is square on against the sun on the winter solstice.

TABLE 10.

UNIT	PERIMETER	1/365.24 TH	MEANING
Feet	3043.66 feet	8.33 feet	Light from sun to earth = 8.33 seconds
Inches	36524 Inches	100 Inches	100 inches = 10 Revolutions of sun
Cm	92770 Cm	254 Cm	254 days equals 10 revolutions of sun
Metres	927.70 Met	2.54 Metres	1m=39.37" or 100cm = 3.937 revs of sun

One odd feature noticeable in the great pyramid is how small the corridors are. The ascending passage leading on to the grand gallery, which finally brings you into the Kings Chamber measures only 3 feet 11 inches high, 3 feet 5 inches wide, and runs a total length of 129 feet. The horizontal passage leading to the Queens Chamber has a similar dimension of 3 feet 9 inches high and runs a total length 127 feet. Finally, the descending passage leading to the Subterranean Chamber is only 3 feet 11 inches high, 3 feet 6 inches wide, and runs a total length of 350 feet. You can clearly see that these passages were not constructed for people to walk through. If this magnificent monument was intended as a burial tomb for the Pharaoh then one would expect the corridors to be large and impressive. Not small passages where you have to crawl on your hands and knees. Furthermore, how on earth did they manage to have a ritual funeral procession in such a confined space? The answer makes perfect sense when you consider that the pyramid and its internal corridors were not designed for human access.

I believe the measurements of the corridors accommodate an ancient biblical relic known as the Ark of the Covenant. The Ark of the Covenant was a mysterious box like structure that god instructed Moses to build while wandering about in the wilderness. The Israelites escaped Egyptian captivity after god punished the Pharaoh by inflicting the 10 plagues upon Egypt. After the Israelites escaped, they wandered about in the wilderness for years and were instructed by god to build the Ark of the Covenant. The bible gives us an accurate description of the ark detailed below.

Exodus Chapter 25: Verse 10-22: “Have them make a chest of Acacia wood – two and a half cubits long, a cubit and a half wide, and a cubit and a half high. Overlay it with pure gold, both inside and out, and make a gold moulding around it. Cast four gold rings for it and fasten them to its four feet, with two rings on one side and two rings on the other. Then make poles of acacia wood and overlay them with gold. Insert the poles into the rings on the sides of the chest to carry it. The poles are to remain in the rings of the ark; they are not to be removed. Then put in the ark the Testimony, which I will give you. Make an atonement cover of pure gold – two and a half cubits long and a cubit and half wide. And make two cherubim out of hammered gold at the ends of the cover. Make one cherub on one end and the second cherub on the other; make the cherubim of one piece with the cover, at the two ends. The cherubim are to have their wings spread upward, overshadowing the cover with them. The cherubim are to face each other, looking toward the cover. Place the cover on top of the ark and put in the ark the Testimony, which I will give you. There, above the cover between the two cherubim that are over the ark of the Testimony, I will meet with you and give you all my commands for the Israelites.”

You can see from the beginning of the scripture that the dimensions of the ark are measured in cubits. From the biblical scripture above, the ark was to be constructed 2.5 cubits long, 1.5 cubits wide and 1.5 cubits high. Now a cubit was traditionally 18 inches long, which supposedly related to the length of a man's forearm. That is the distance from his elbow to the tip of his fingers. Therefore, the overall size of the ark would have been 45 inches long, 27 inches wide, and 27 inches high. That gives the Ark a total base perimeter of 144 inches. The reader should be well aware by now that 12 feet contains 144 inches; the sun revolves on its axis 14.4 times per year, there are 1440 minutes contained in one day, and there are 144'000 chosen ones from the biblical book of Revelation. (I think there might just be a connection)

However, the height of the ark did not include the two cherubim that sat on either side of the lid. Once these two cherubim sat on the lid, the ark would have been considerably taller. Unfortunately the height of these two cherubim can only be guessed at. Let me compare the dimensions of say the ascending corridor in the great pyramid with the ark to see how neat a fit can be achieved. The ascending corridor has a height of 47 inches, while the ark has a height of 27 inches. This leaves a gap of 20 inches. In my opinion 20 inches would be more than enough space to accommodate the extra height for the two cherubim.

The ascending corridor has a width of 41 inches, while the ark's width is 27 inches. From these measurements, the ark would fit into the corridor snugly with a marginal gap of 14 inches or 7 inches either side. A gap of 7 inches on either side of the ark is still a neat fit and only amounts to just over a hands width. If the corridors of the great pyramid were constructed to accommodate the Ark of the Covenant, then a margin on either side would have been necessary. Obviously, too neat a fit would have damaged the ark by grazing the side walls of the corridor. So in my opinion, a 7 inch gap on either side is acceptable. This doesn't conclusively prove that the corridors of the great pyramid were constructed to accommodate the Ark. Nevertheless, it is suspicious that the dimensions of the ark and the corridors are extremely similar.

It is also worth noting that the Ark of the Covenant would fit comfortably into the granite sarcophagus that sits in the Kings Chamber. Official Egyptology claims that this sarcophagus was the burial place for the dead Pharaoh. Yet, no dead Pharaoh has ever been found within the pyramid or the sarcophagus. Furthermore, there is practically no evidence to suggest that the Pharaoh was ever buried there. If the sarcophagus was the resting place for the Ark of the Covenant; do the dimensions fit neatly? The internal cavity of the granite sarcophagus measures 78 inches long, 27 inches wide, and 34.5 inches high. The Ark has a width of 27 inches, which fits perfectly into the width of the sarcophagus. This perfect fit must surely arouse suspicion. The length of the ark is 45 inches, while the internal length of the sarcophagus is 78 inches. This leaves a total margin of 33 inches or 17.5 inches on either side. Surely this is too much and suggests another purpose was used for the sarcophagus. However, notice from the biblical scripture above, that two poles were to be inserted into the rings for the purpose of carrying the Ark. Furthermore, the poles were not to be removed. This would mean the length of the ark would effectively be longer than 45 inches, because the carrying poles would protrude outwards from either end. No one can say for certain what length these poles were. But a margin of 17.5 inches on either side would be an appropriate length to accommodate the carrying poles. Finally, the internal height of the sarcophagus is 34.5 inches, while the ark has a height of 27 inches. As I described previously this height did not include the two cherubim on top of the lid of the ark. The height of the cherubim is not known, but there is a margin of 7.5 inches remaining within the sarcophagus to accommodate them. This might sound like a small margin to accommodate the two cherubim, but there is no way of telling for sure if the sarcophagus had a lid or not.

After looking at the dimensions of the ark, the sarcophagus, and the corridors within the great pyramid, I have come to the conclusion there is a real possibility that a connection exists.

The ancient Israelites used the ark as an instrument to communicate with the biblical God. This would be conducted in a private enclosure known as the holy of holies, within the tabernacle. I believe the great pyramid was the original tabernacle where Moses would consult God and receive instructions. God would speak to Moses by appearing from between the two cherubim on top of the ark. On occasions, the ark was used as a lethal weapon against the enemies of God's chosen people. There are numerous instances in the Bible where the Ark indiscriminately slaughtered people by emitting bolts of lightning.

TABLE 11.

	ARK COVENANT	SARCOPHAGUS	ASCENDING CORRIDOR
LENGTH	45 Inches	78 Inches	1548 Inches
WIDTH	27 Inches	27 Inches	41 Inches
HEIGHT	27 Inches	34.5 Inches	47 Inches

Clearly the Ark appears to have supernatural powers and could be lethal if misused in any way. There are some that claim the Ark of the Covenant is still secretly hidden within the great pyramid waiting to be uncovered. Furthermore, the ruling elite will reveal it to the world at the appointed time in the future to demonstrate its true potential and power. The Ark of the Covenant could also be some cunning device manufactured by the ruling elite to dupe humanity into believing their new emerging religion. That new emerging religion will be the elite's version of 'truth' they wish to impose upon humanity. A 'truth' that will further enslave us all into believing another manufactured lie. I believe the ruling elite have existed for thousands of years. This is why we find units that relate to the heavens within our modern measurements. It was the ruling elite who invented these units thousands of years ago. It was also the elite that were behind the creation of the great pyramid and the Ark of the Covenant. The elite still exist today and know full well the true potential of the Ark. Here lies the planted seed that will one day give birth to a new religion and possibly dupe humanity into oblivion. The ruling elite are clever and have rigged a meticulous trap for humanity to fall into. Furthermore, this new religion will play on our natural weaknesses like hope and fear. The hope will come in the form of eternal salvation; while the fear comes in the shape of a messiah who will pass judgement and punishment upon us all. The second coming of Christ springs to mind. It's strange how these seeds have already been planted within the human psyche. These religious notions are intentionally, but subtly place into the human belief system by the ruling elite. The ruling elite will transform these subconscious beliefs into reality by creating the correct circumstances for them to materialize. However, this will only come about if it harmonizes with their agenda.

There has been much written about ancient Egypt over the years and I don't claim to be an expert on the subject. In fact the material in this chapter merely touches the tip of a giant iceberg. I certainly don't claim to have conclusive answers to all the intricate mysteries regarding the great pyramid. Hopefully, the snippets of information I have provided will at least clear some doubt from the reader's mind. Remember, there have been literally hundreds of theories put forward throughout the years attempting to explain the pyramids of Egypt. These incredible monuments will continue to fascinate humans for centuries to come. So the mystery goes on. But Egypt holds a special status, because it's a real place that features in the biblical mysteries and includes people like Moses, Jesus, the Israelites, and the immortal Pharaohs. Of all the ancient mysteries that have captivated humanity, Egypt must surely be the location that grips the imagination the most.

Final Thoughts

Evolution is the natural flow of the universe. We are all on this evolutionary journey whether we like it or not. It's not just living organisms that are evolving, but the laws of physics too. The universe we all reside in is in a state of cosmic development. This natural development is supposed to be a positive and beneficial growth for us all. We are all on the universal journey of evolvement, and that also includes the global ruling elite. All species are special in their own way and possess individual traits that are unique to them. No one species holds total knowledge of all the universal secrets. I believe the sum total of all knowledge is spread around all species. In this way the universal secrets are kept safe; in a kind of collective Holy Grail. However, because no one species possesses total knowledge of all things; a large degree of ignorance becomes a common trait. Only by evolving does a species grasp and understand the next snippet of knowledge on life's mysterious journey. Evolution is a long interlinked sequence that advances us all forward, while at the same time it releases another truth about life's mysteries as we progress. Whether or not a particular species wishes to learn that lesson is entirely up to them. Eventually, the final link leads to ultimate knowledge, or God. I believe all species possess the sum knowledge of all the species lower down in their respective evolutionary pecking order. However, this knowledge is contained within our genetics. Genetic information is the only biological aspect of us that is transferred over to the next generation. So in effect, humans have been gifted with the sum knowledge of all the previous species in the evolutionary chain. This wealth of knowledge isn't easily forthcoming on a conscious level. It has to be tapped into by stimulating the correct conditions. Even then it doesn't occur instantaneously. It is similar to a plant blossoming in summertime. The plant just doesn't bloom when the sun arrives. It slowly opens its petals as the conditions of summertime arrive. The sun is the natural driving mechanism by which all life progresses forward in this universal journey. However, humans are being kept in a constant mental, spiritual, and physical prison that prevents this from occurring. This is why humanity is being bombarded by endless triviality at every angle. In effect it has become our invisible prison. The global ruling elite know full well this is the case and are continuing to keep us in an artificial state of suppression.

It is difficult to understand why a more advanced species would want to do this. It can only be accounted for by the one trait indicative to all species. That trait is the act of good and evil. Why does anyone decide to commit an evil act? We can see this evil decision making being made by Satan in the biblical story. Satan and his henchmen decided to rebel against the accepted divine way of things. One of the true gifts of life is the fact we have been endowed with the power to choose our own course of action. Maybe this is what Satan done. We are not pre-programmed robots following a string of set programs. The gift of free will is the free gift given by the laws that govern us all. The global ruling elite understand the true aspect of free will. They aim to seize humanity's free will and replace it with an invented imitation to suit their agenda. Of course, their imitation is a masquerade and will only give the illusion of free will. In a similar way our western democracy only gives the illusion of freedom and justice. In truth, the global ruling elite is Satan along with his henchmen. Their agenda is to hoard as much knowledge as possible while at the same time halting humanity from evolving onto its next natural state. This is why humanity has been in an ongoing state of suffering for thousands of years. The ruling elite are well aware of how the evolutionary mechanism works and endeavour to keep humanity ignorant of it.

In spite of the entire negative viewpoint I have painted for humanity, the global elite are still governed by natural universal laws. I doubt very much that even these evolved beings have the real power to stifle or re-direct the natural course of the universe. In fact, I believe humanity's fate unsurprisingly dwells on the true scales of justice and will have a favourable and positive outcome. The global ruling elite are merely a splinter in the grand scheme of things. If nature was to run its natural course unhindered, then I believe all life would benefit.

I hope my numerical findings will offer some proof to the reader that a hidden hand ultimately is at work in human affairs. There are too many coincidences to ignore when one takes a real look at the origins of our measuring systems. What I have discovered is only the tip of a gigantic iceberg. Many will argue that these findings are just a string of fortunate accidents and nothing more. However, the elite habitually hide under a cloak of coincidences. This is why they have been so successful in duping the masses for so long.

Finally, good and evil exist on all evolutionary levels. So the real fight in life is between these two opposing forces. If the ruling elite are a conscious evil force inhabiting the universe, then surely there must be an opposite force in operation fighting for justice, truth, and liberty. Perhaps these unknown powers are the real angels that will one day bring salvation. Ultimately good must prevail.

The End.

GLOSSARY

Table 1: Page 93

Table 2: Page 95

Table 3: Page 97

Table 4: Page 102

Table 5: Page 104

Table 6: Page 105

Table 7: Page 110

Table 8: Page 116

Table 9: Page 121

Table 10: Page 160

Table 11: Page 164

Diagram 1: Page 111

Diagram 2: Page 113

Diagram 3: Page 114

Diagram 4: Page 117

Diagram 5: Page 117

Diagram 6: Page 118

Speed of light: 186'262 Miles per second.

Average Diameter of Earth: 7'920 Miles.

Circumference of Earth: 24'906 Miles.

Diameter of Moon: 2160 Miles.

Circumference of Moon: 6784 Miles.

Distance between Earth and Moon: 238'906 Miles.

Distance between Earth and Sun: 93'000'000 Miles.

Rotational period of sun: 25.4 Days.

Sidereal Orbit of Moon: 27.32 Days.

Diameter of sun: 864'950 Miles.

Earth to Moon size ratio: Earth is 3.6 times larger than the Moon.

Time for light to travel the circumference of the Earth:
0.1337 Seconds.

Time for light to travel the circumference of the Moon:
0.036 Seconds.

Light travelling 27.32 times the circumference of the Moon:
1 Second.

Distance light travels in 1 day: 16'094'764'800 Miles.

Orbital distance of Earth: 584'319'000 Miles

Orbital distance of Moon: 1'501'046 Miles.

Earths orbital speed around the sun: 66'636 Miles per hour.

Solar rotations in one year: 14.4

Orbital Diameter of Earth: 186'000'000 Miles.

Orbital Diameter of Moon: 477'812 Miles.